'Grapevine' lures hopefuls for chief's job

The impending retirement of Arlington Heights Police Chief L. W. Calderwood has prompted more than a dozen inquiries, although there has been no formal notice of the job opening.

Gregory Ford, village personnel director, said advertisements for the position will not appear in professional police journals until next month. Nevertheless, Ford said more than a dozen policemen already have made contact with the village, seeking the job.

He said the news of the position has spread among departments in the Chicago area through "grapevines," prompting the inquiries and applications to date.

VILLAGE MGR. L. A. Hanson, who is charged with hiring the new chief, said the five-member screening panel to help with the selection process tentatively has been chosen. Hanson said he would not release the names until all the persons contacted accepted the duties.

Earlier, Hanson said the panel would be made up of the three-man village fire and police commission and two persons experienced in police administration. The police administrators, not necessarily police chiefs nor active members of police departments, would be from outside the Northwest suburban area.

Thursday, Hanson narrowed the area from which the two would be drawn to the North Shore suburbs.

He said one had accepted the task, but word was still being awaited from the other person.

DESPITE THE delays in placing the advertisements and naming the panel, Hanson said the new chief will be named by the time the 72-year-old Calderwood steps down on July 30.

"Oh sure, that will be no problem,"

Jury to quiz associates of Columbo?

by JOHN MAES

Several persons listed in an address book belonging to slain Elk Grove Village resident Frank Columbo may be called to testify before a Cook County Grand Jury next week.

The jury is investigating possible crime syndicate involvement in the murder of Columbo, 43, his wife and their son, Michael, 13, found slain in their Elk Grove Village home May 7, Assistant State's Atty. Terry Sullivan, said Friday. Sullivan is directing the inquiry.

Listed in Columbo's address book were persons with the surnames of known crime syndicate figures, but the investigation so far has not turned up any connection between the names and the syndicate.

AT LEAST 15 persons have been summoned to give testimony so far including officers of two Chicago companies in which Columbo was said to be silent partner, Sullivan said.

He added an anonymous letter to Elk Grove Village police naming one man as one of the family's slayers would also play a role in the grand jury inquiry.

He characterized the letter as being a "little more substantive" than most evidence brought before the jury so far, but declined to say if the person named would be subpoenaed.

Police earlier said the letter named two men as being involved in the slaying, but Sullivan said he knows of only one who was named.

Meanwhile, Elk Grove police clamped a tight lid Friday on release of information related to the case.

Garden plots grow by 'leaps and bounds'

by JOE SWICKARD

Jake Hagy was out tilling the soil of his vest-pocket farm near the Wilke-Kirchoff retention basin Friday, instead of sitting in his office.

"It was just too nice to stay in the office," Hagy said as he began to break up the soil. "There's a lot of enjoyment in this."

In its fourth summer, the Arlington Heights Park Districts' garden plot program is larger now than it ever has ben, with more than 700 of the 35-foot by 25-foot plots rented for $5 a piece.

"It's growing by leaps and bounds," said Angelo Capulli, the park's superintendent of maintenance. "It's probably the most successful program we have. We had more than 200 people turn out for a garden workshop one night."

THE PROGRAM has been billed as a way to beat rising food prices or to get truly garden-fresh vegetables on the dinner table. but, the gardeners will tell you it's the pleasure of working with the earth to make things grow that brings them out.

Frank Stucko paused from watering the freshly dug rows.

"I just love it. It keeps me busy. Last year I had only one piece of ground, this year I got two," Stucko said and pointed across his neatly staked and marked plot.

"A woman said it was too weedy. It isn't. It just has to be worked," Stucko said of the second plot.

HE HAS BEEN gardening each year the district has offered the plots and he has been successful each year.

Fishing opener heated by sonar, forest fires

by JIM COOK

BRAINERD, Minn. — They call it "Heartland Walleye Country" but to the one million fishermen who are expected to invade Minnesota for the fishing opener today, it's much more than that.

It's Viking land, scented with the pleasing aroma of pine needles, fresh air and a certain tranquility preserved by isolation from the bustling antics of the city.

But despite ideal fishing conditions — temperatures in the 70s, relatively no wind and a cloudless sky — the annual Governor's Fishing Party here was almost postponed because of volatile fire conditions.

IN THE PAST seven days, firefighters have battled 250 blazes in the thirsty north country. The U.S. Forest Service has 160 men, 10 bulldozers and three water-bombing aircraft on alert, watching for that carelessly-tossed cigaret or unattended camp fire that would set off hundreds of acres of timber in a matter of hours.

But vying with Mother Nature for attention in Paul Bunyan country is a smoldering controversy, sparked by the introduction of the chart recorder.

The sophisticated fishing aid, which graphically depicts the underwater structure of a lake, relays cuch a vital information to the angler as depth, type of bottom and presence of fish — to the degree that veteran chart-decoders can identify the species of fish from blurbs on the recorder.

A move to ban the graph was proposed in Minnesota last year but after passing the House of Representatives 117-8, the bill died in the Senate after being tabled for seven months.

LEGISLATION to outlaw the instrument originated from figures that contended anglers who employ the recorder are 50 per cent more successful at catching walleyes than those without the sonar.

"I have talked to some expert fishermen and they tell me they can pinpoint the fish and even tell what kind they are," said Jack Maloney, fisheries biologist for the Minnesota Dept. of Natural Resources (DNR) in Brainerd.

"Now if this is true, they are taking sport out of fishing and you definitely could cut into a fish population."

Dennis Schupp, a research biologist from Grand Rapids, Minn., agreed. "The graph keeps a record of its discoveries. An angler armed with this information takes away one of the main advantages a fish has in avoiding being caught.

"Fishing has often been called a contemplative sport," Schupp added. "A large part of the joy and sport of fishing is pitting the anglers' knowledge and skill against the mysteries of fish behavior. The fact that you can't see the fish you're trying to fool makes catching them more satisfying."

Ford, Reagan trade shots on state of economy

by IRA R. ALLEN
United Press International

President Ford visited two border states Friday, boasting of his accomplishments in negotiations with the Russians and taking credit for a revitalized economy.

The trip to Tennessee and Kentucky was a prelude to Ford's whistlestop tour Saturday of Michigan, where Ronald Reagan Friday attacked Ford's record on the economy. Reagan also said it would be "something of a miracle" if he beats the President in his home state next Tuesday.

Democrats Jimmy Carter and Edmund G. Brown Jr. Friday visited the nation's capital before resuming their tight contest for next Tuesday's Maryland primary.

Carter, before meeting with AFL-CIO chief George Meany in Washington, said Brown has no hope of winning the Democratic nomination but has been "adopted by the machine politicians who want to horse-trade delegates or deadlock the Democratic convention."

Brown, at an impromptu press conference on a downtown Washington sidewalk, was aksed, "Why are you trying to stop Carter." He said his is not a "stop Carter" campaign but a "start America" effort.

"WHY IS CARTER sending busloads of people (to Maryland) and engaging in this kind of rhetoric to stop me?" Brown asked. ". . . This process is open. The wider the debate the better for everyone."

Carter, after an hour-long meeting with Meany, said the two "recemented a friendship and an acquaintance that we have had for years." He also said he believes labor will support him if he wins the Democratic nomination.

"I did not ask Mr. Meany for his support, nor did he give it to me," Carter said.

Ford began his day in Tennessee and then went to Kentucky, asking both Republicans and Democrats to vote for him in the May 25 primaries because "we've cut the inflation rate

UPS, Teamsters agree on contract

A tentative agreement between the United Parcel Service and negotiators for 14,000 striking Teamsters was reached Friday in talks at the Arlington Park Hilton Hotel, Arlington Heights. Terms of the pact were not released, but union members will return to work Monday pending ratification of the pact, according to Richard D. Williams, regional director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service. The UPS strike by Teamsters, called May 1, has affected 13 Midwest states, but not Illinois. Federal mediator Sherman J. Warady said the two sides negotiated continuously for the past two weeks in Arlington Heights, but the agreement came after top figures from both sides entered the talks this week.

Pikarsky halts railroad talks

RTA Board Chairman Milton Pikarsky says infighting among the board's suburban and city members has forced him to temporarily suspend purchase-of-service talks with railroads. Suburban members have said they will not vote for RTA expenditures unless Pikarsky resigns. Thursday, the board failed to approve a transfer of $185,000 from one account to another, leaving a shortage in the fund used for professional and technical services. Pikarsky said Friday he is confident the problem will be resolved when "cool heads and cool minds" return to the board.

Carbona files for new trial

Ruthe Carbona, convicted of the 1971 murder of her husband, has filed a petition for a new trial. A spokesman for the Cook County State's Attorney's Office Friday said Mrs. Carbona's petition is set for a hearing Thursday in circuit court. Mrs. Carbona was taken into custody this week after she failed in a three-year attempt to have her conviction overturned by higher courts. She was found guilty in 1973 of shooting and killing her husband, Joseph, a sheriff's police lieutenant. The shooting occurred in the couple's Mount Prospect home. She had been free since July 27, 1973, on a $25,000 bond pending the outcome of her appeals.

SWAT expenses criticized

Two Rolling Meadows aldermen have criticized city expenditures to equip the police department's Special Weapons and Tactics (SWAT) squad. "It's the most ridiculous thing I've ever heard of," Ald. James Huddleston, 4th said. Another alderman, William Ahrens, 2nd, said he does not oppose the idea of a SWAT team but added, "Let's face it, how many times is a bank president going to be held for ransom?" The city's five-man team was trained for free by the FBI, but some $3,000 in equipment will be needd for the special squad. Mayor Roland J. Meyer said Friday he supports the expenditure as "a good investment."

House candidates differ on Northwest abortions

The two Democratic candidates for the Illinois House from the 3rd Legislative District Friday expressed opposite views on Northwest Community Hospital's decision to liberalize its abortion policy.

State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, who two years ago urged the hospital to change its policy, said, "I congratulate the hospital board for their decision."

However, Joan Brennan of Elk Grove Village, the other Democrat running for the one House seat traditionally won by a Democrat, said she opposes abortion on demand and thinks the board should rescind its decision.

THE HOSPITAL BOARD last month voted to allow abortions at the hospital through the first three months of pregnancy. Prior to the board's vote, the hospital had permitted abortions only to save the life of the mother.

Mrs. Chapman and Mrs. Brennan are considered rivals in the campaign for the Illinois House even though they are technically running mates because two of the three 3rd District seats traditionally go to Republicans, while the third is won by a Democrat. Republican State Reps. Donald Totten of Schaumburg and Virginia Macdonald of Arlington Heights are running for re-election.

Mrs. Brennan, who before the March 16 primary attacked Mrs. Chapman for her votes against increased state school aid last fall, said she thinks the abortion question may become an issue in her legisltive campaign.

Mrs. Brennan, who teaches handicapped children, said in a letter to The Herald that abortion on demand implies a threat "upon those to whom I have committed my professional life."

SHE SAID SHE believes abortion is "acceptable when it (the pregnancy) endangers the life of the mother," but otherwise "I'd rather see prevention than destruction."

Mrs. Chapman said she did not want to answer Mrs. Brennan, but said she was pleased with the hospital decision and believes the majority of Northwest suburban residents agree with her.

Mrs. Chapman said Northwest Community Hospital "is a community hospital" and should provide "the full range of services permitted under the law." She said the hospital "is letting the community down if they force women to leave their community and their own doctors" in order to obtain abortions.

She said she believes having an abortion is a personal decision to be made by a woman and her doctor. "If an individual is against abortion, it's a simple matter — they don't have one," she said.

Sunday's ERA rally to feature Chapman talk

Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, will be one of several featured speakers at a national Equal Rights Amendment rally Sunday in Springfield.

The rally will climax a Boston-to-Chicago train trek, dubbed the ERA Freedom Train. Train passengers will join Chicago-area ERA supporters Saturday afternoon for a bus trip to Springfield.

The event is planned by the National Organization for Women to emphasize the national significance of the Illinois legislature's vote on ERA. The resolution has passed the Illinois House, but still faces some opposition in the Senate. Illinois is among the last states still to take a stand on ERA, which must be ratified by 38 states by 1979. So far, 34 states have ratified it.

Joining Rep. Chapman on the podium at the rally will be Rep. Giddy Dyer, R-Hinsdale, a cosponsor of ERA along with Mrs. Chapman; and actor Bruce Solomon, who plays Dennis Foley on the popular TV soap opera "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman." Solomon also is an ERA supporter.

Cosponsors of the event, along with NOW, are the League of Women Voters and several unions. While the rally is going on in Springfield, other members of these groups will be canvassing local legislative districts to drum up support for the amendment.

UPS, Teamsters agree on contract

A tentative agreement between the United Parcel Service and negotiators for 14,000 striking Teamsters was reached Friday in talks at the Arlington Park Hilton Hotel, Arlington Heights. Terms of the pact were not released, but union members will return to work Monday pending ratification of the pact, according to Richard D. Williams, regional director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service. The UPS strike by Teamsters, called May 1, has affected 13 Midwest states, but not Illinois. Federal mediator Sherman J. Warady said the two sides negotiated continuously for the past two weeks in Arlington Heights, but the agreement came after top figures from both sides entered the talks this week.

Pikarsky halts railroad talks

RTA Board Chairman Milton Pikarsky says infighting among the board's suburban and city members has forced him to temporarily suspend purchase-of-service talks with railroads. Suburban members have said they will not vote for RTA expenditures unless Pikarsky resigns. Thursday, the board failed to approve a transfer of $185,000 from one account to another, leaving a shortage in the fund used for professional and technical services. Pikarsky said Friday he is confident the problem will be resolved when "cool heads and cool minds" return to the board.

Carbona files for new trial

Ruthe Carbona, convicted of the 1971 murder of her husband, has filed a petition for a new trial. A spokesman for the Cook County State's Attorney's Office Friday said Mrs. Carbona's petition is set for a hearing Thursday in circuit court. Mrs. Carbona was taken into custody this week after she failed in a three-year attempt to have her conviction overturned by higher courts. She was found guilty in 1973 of shooting and killing her husband, Joseph, a sheriff's police lieutenant. The shooting occurred in the couple's Mount Prospect home. She had been free since July 27, 1973, on a $25,000 bond pending the outcome of her appeals.

SWAT expenses criticized

Two Rolling Meadows aldermen have criticized city expenditures to equip the police department's Special Weapons and Tactics (SWAT) squad. "It's the most ridiculous thing I've ever heard of," Ald. James Huddleston, 4th said. Another alderman, William Ahrens, 2nd, said he does not oppose the idea of a SWAT team but added, "Let's face it, how many times is a bank president going to be held for ransom?" The city's five-man team was trained for free by the FBI, but some $3,000 in equipment will be needd for the special squad. Mayor Roland J. Meyer said Friday he supports the expenditure as "a good investment."

House candidates differ on Northwest abortions

The two Democratic candidates for the Illinois House from the 3rd Legislative District Friday expressed opposite views on Northwest Community Hospital's decision to liberalize its abortion policy.

State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, who two years ago urged the hospital to change its policy, said, "I congratulate the hospital board for their decision."

However, Joan Brennan of Elk Grove Village, the other Democrat running for the one House seat traditionally won by a Democrat, said she opposes abortion on demand and thinks the board should rescind its decision.

THE HOSPITAL BOARD last month voted to allow abortions at the hospital through the first three months of pregnancy. Prior to the board's vote, the hospital had permitted abortions only to save the life of the mother.

Mrs. Chapman and Mrs. Brennan are considered rivals in the campaign for the Illinois House even though they are technically running mates because two of the three 3rd District seats traditionally go to Republicans, while the third is won by a Democrat. Republican State Reps. Donald Totten of Schaumburg and Virginia Macdonald of Arlington Heights are running for re-election.

Mrs. Brennan, who before the March 16 primary attacked Mrs. Chapman for her votes against increased state school aid last fall, said she thinks the abortion question may become an issue in her legisltive campaign.

Mrs. Brennan, who teaches handicapped children, said in a letter to The Herald that abortion on demand implies a threat "upon those to whom I have committed my professional life."

SHE SAID SHE believes abortion is "acceptable when it (the pregnancy) endangers the life of the mother," but otherwise "I'd rather see prevention than destruction."

Mrs. Chapman said she did not want to answer Mrs. Brennan, but said she was pleased with the hospital decision and believes the majority of Northwest suburban residents agree with her.

Mrs. Chapman said Northwest Community Hospital "is a community hospital" and should provide "the full range of services permitted under the law." She said the hospital "is letting the community down if they force women to leave their community and their own doctors" in order to obtain abortions.

She said she believes having an abortion is a personal decision to be made by a woman and her doctor. "If an individual is against abortion, it's a simple matter — they don't have one," she said.

Sunday's ERA rally to feature Chapman talk

Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, will be one of several featured speakers at a national Equal Rights Amendment rally Sunday in Springfield.

The rally will climax a Boston-to-Chicago train trek, dubbed the ERA Freedom Train. Train passengers will join Chicago-area ERA supporters Saturday afternoon for a bus trip to Springfield.

The event is planned by the National Organization for Women to emphasize the national significance of the Illinois legislature's vote on ERA. The resolution has passed the Illinois House, but still faces some opposition in the Senate. Illinois is among the last states still to take a stand on ERA, which must be ratified by 38 states by 1979. So far, 34 states have ratified it.

Joining Rep. Chapman on the podium at the rally will be Rep. Giddy Dyer, R-Hinsdale, a cosponsor of ERA along with Mrs. Chapman; and actor Bruce Solomon, who plays Dennis Foley on the popular TV soap opera "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman." Solomon also is an ERA supporter.

Cosponsors of the event, along with NOW, are the League of Women Voters and several unions. While the rally is going on in Springfield, other members of these groups will be canvassing local legislative districts to drum up support for the amendment.

CIA link to foes of Trujillo

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A study of censored internal memos and cables shows CIA requests in 1960 to supply opponents of Rafael Trujillo with high-powered rifles with telescopic sights. Trujillo was assassinated a year later.

The memos also discussed blowing up someone or something in the Dominican Republic — possibly Trujillo — and killing some high Dominican official — again perhaps Trujillo — while he was trysting with his mistress.

Censored or partial CIA responses to 74 requests under the Freedom of Information Act were released Thursday by the Center for National Security Studies, a privately financed group.

Some material went back to 1960, when the CIA initiated plots to assassinate Fidel Castro. Others concerned plans to topple Trujillo, Dominican Republic dictator who was assassinated by local dissidents May 30, 1961. There also was a general contingency plan for killing foreign leaders, titled ZR-RIFLE.

The CIA blew hot and cold on many schemes — first giving approval, then indicating second thoughts or rescinding.

Reports of CIA involvement in Trujillo's death were among the matters investigated by the Senate Intelligence committee but nothing was ever proven.

Among the items released were:

• July 1, 1960, Headquarters memorandum: "It is proposed to procure and deliver to underground opposition force in the Dominican Republic twelve (12) sterile (nontraceable) U.S. rifles, Model 1903 (Springfield), with telescopic sights, together with five hundred (500) rounds of ammunition for same."

Later messages said the State Dept. disapproved sending the arms in the diplomatic pouch, although other cables said guns had been shipped that way before.

• Feb. 15, 1961, on plans to blow up in the Dominican Republic. "Will get info soon possible but (CIA officer) thinks original (dissident) plan for action at corners Maximo Gomez and George Washington (streets in the Dominican Republic capital) using high explosive utterly out of question due constant gurad that point.

"(CIA officers) view some remote chance place charge in storm sewer draining to sea on George Washington opposite Jaragua Bungalows. This means put radio device under air conditioner in bungalow. If thickness greater than 3 inches this placement to be excluded . . . will pouch photos .

• March 20, 1961, cable to CIA headquarters from CIA agent in Cuidad Trujillo about an apparent plan for dissidents to kill some top person "with quiet weapons" while he was with his mistress.

"His group . . . plan now this. Group knows identity mistress in capital. He visits her once a week or once in two weeks, goes to her apartment incognito and lightly guarded . . . (censored) dressed as Army officers, small group will go to entrance, distract guard with prefext, dispatch him or them in silence, enter apartment and try to (censored) possibly including mistress, in silence."

"To do, they need five M-3 or comparable machineguns and 1,500 rounds ammo for personal defense in event firefight. Will use quiet weapons for basic job.

Plea for truce ignored in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Gunmen ignored a new ceasefire Saturday, with battles throughout the country and bloody clashes between Palestinian and pro-Syrian forces threatening Syria's peace initiative in Lebanon.

Palestinian Liberation Organization sources said troops of the Syrian-led Palestinian Liberation Army withdrew from battlegrounds in Tripoli late Friday, obeying orders from PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat.

But an all-day communications blackout with the northern port city made it impossible to confirm the report.

The truce called by Premier Rashid Karami, the 30th in Lebanon's 13-month civil war, was to have taken effect at midnight to end fighting that has killed at least 250 persons in two days.

But fierce clashes erupted anew in Beirut's battered port and commercial districts Saturday and artillery duels continued between Christian and Moslem villages of the eastern Mount Lebanon region.

A major battle raged in mountain district, where leftists and rightists traded heavy mortar fire in a resort area previously untouched by the war.

The new fighting was sparked by three-day clashes in Tripoli between Arafat's Al Fatah guerrillas and two pro-Syrian forces — the PLA and Saiqa guerrillas.

Arafat Friday ordered the PLA troops to withdraw from Tripoli to confront right-wing Christian forces in north Lebanon.

The PLA is ostensibly the military wing of the PLO, but most of its units have been stationed in Syria and are led by Syrian officers. Diplomatic sources said the PLO order was an open challenge to Damascus.

In another blow to Syria's faltering peace plans for Lebanon, PLO leaders Friday joined Lebanon's leftists in demanding an immediate withdrawal of Syrian forces from the war-ravaged country.

The hard-line Palestinian "rejection front" said Syrian troops and Saiqa units attacked Palestinian bases in a village near the Israeli border. They charged the pro-Syrian forces had launched a campaign to "liquidate" the Palestinians on orders from Damascus.

Rejection front leader George Habash appeared at a Beirut rally with leftist chief Kamal Jumblatt and declared, "the only role for the Palestinian resistance is to place every fighter, every bullet and every weapon in the service of the nationalist (leftist) cause."

I did nothing wrong: Callaway

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate hearings to determine whether Howard Callaway pressured the Forest Service into reversing a recommendation against expansion of his Colorado ski resort onto public land ended Friday with Callaway insisting he did no wrong.

"I think the evidence shows an attempt to influence," said Sen. Floyd Haskell, D-Colo., chairman of the subcommittee. "But it's an entirely different thing to know whether it was necessary."

Haskell said the evidence indicated Forest Service officials were not influenced by the former Army secretary's efforts to go over their heads.

But Callaway insisted he did nothing improper and asked that the committee — when it writes its report — "move away from innuendo and get to the facts."

Callaway said his involvement had been limited to a single phone call "when I felt we had been betrayed" by the Forest Service, which had recommended the ski resort not be allowed to use Snodgrass Mountain, near Callaway's Crested Butte ski resort.

"I hope I'll be looked at on my own and not be held responsible for what others did that I know nothing about," he said.

Callaway said he and his brother-in-law, Ralph Walton, had been "assured" their Crested Butte ski resort would be allowed to expand when they bought it in 1969. Under questioning, however, Callaway acknowledged there had been no formal understanding that would be allowed.

Callaway said his only phone call was to Deputy Agriculture Sec. Richard Ashworth — a fellow Georgian who had been Callaway's speech writer in an unsuccessful race for governor. That call, he said, was only to protest delays, not to ask for expansion.

Haskell, citing many contacts between Callaway and Agriculture Dept. officials, told Callaway it was "a little bit of an oversimplification to say that you made only one phone call."

Callaway admitted he discussed his problems with the Forest Service at a meeting in his Pentagon office with Ashworth, then Agriculture Undersecretary J. Phil Campbell — also a Georgian — and Associate Chief Rexford R. Resler of the Forest Service.

But he said the meeting — held on his last day as secretary — had been requested by them. Callaway was Army secretary until last July 3, resigning to become President Ford's campaign manager. He quit that post when Crested Butte became a public question.

Tentative accord in beer strike

The nation's largest beermaker and its striking Teamster Union employes reached tentative agreement Friday on a new contract that could send some 8,000 workers back to work at nine breweries across the nation. Reagan tops Ford in campaign spending

President Ford and Ronald Reagan — the big spenders of the 1976 presidential season — are closing in on the $13 million spending limit with more than half the delegates yet to be picked, financial records showed Friday. Campaign finance reports filed with the Federal Election Commission showed Reagan has raised and spent nearly $9.5 million, while Ford has spent about $8.8 million.

Group warns against waxed produce

The shopper should know if the cucumbers, tomatoes and plums shining on the produce rack have been waxed to stop shrinkage and "add luster," a consumer group said Friday. Millions of pounds of waxed produce are sold yearly in apparent violation of federal regulations requiring the labeling of all "direct food additives," the Center for Science in the Public Interest said. "Waxes have not been tested to determine if they cause cancer, mutations, reproduction problems or other adverse effects," the privately funded research group told the Federal Drug Administration.

Rhodesia Friday canceled all exemptions from a mobilization of army reserves in the latest emergency move to get the country on a war footing against black guerrilla campaigns. Security force headquarters announced another 15 deaths since Wednesday. Since Jan. 1 the two sides have lost 226 persons.

Banker gunned down in Paris

A young anarchist Friday shot and killed the president of France's second largest bank on a downtown Paris street and then committed suicide with a World War II German army pistol. Police said Jacques Chaine, 61, head of the state-owned Credit Lyonnais, was shot point-blank in the chest as he was getting out of his chauffeured limousine. Chaine struggled out of the car as a second shot grazed his wife's jaw. The assailant, identified by police as Jean Bilski, 22, then shot himself through the head with the 9mm pistol.

Ex-Daley aide avoids prison

Earl Bush, former press secretary to Mayor Richard J. Daley, was placed on two years probation Friday when federal officials refused to accept a one-year work-release sentence. The work-release sentence would have allowed Bush to work for one year on a community newspaper without serving time in a regular prison cell. The U.S. Bureau of Prisons and U.S. Attorney Samuel Skinner opposed the work-release program on the grounds that convicted public officials should be sent to jail.

Soviet newsman charged in effort to buy secrets

TOKYO (UPI) — A Soviet newsman reported missing by his embassy was arrested on charges of trying to buy military information from a crewman aboard the U.S. Navy aircraft carrier Midway, Tokyo police said Friday.

Tokyo police announced the arrest just three hours before the new Soviet ambassador to Japan, Dmitri Polyansky, presented his credentials to Emperor Hirohito at the Imperial Palace. But political analysts said there was no evidence the announcement was timed to embarrass Polyansky or slight Moscow.

Matchekhine was apprehended Wednesday night as he left a downtown restaurant with the American sailor. Police withheld the name of the seaman and did not say whether he was cooperating with authorities.

Matchekhine is believed to have met the sailor about ten times, offering to pay him $1,000 for each piece of information concerning radar aircraft electronic apparatus, and military codes.

He reportedly met the sailor a year ago during a festival in Yokohama and subsequently befriended the seaman's family, entertaining them in restaurants and even giving their child a birthday gift.

Soviet embassy officials in Tokyo said his arrest was based on groundless "slander" by the American seaman and warned the matter could become a serious issue.

"Unless the Japanese authorities take proper action, the matter is going to become a serious issue and the Japanese authorities will have to take the responsibility for the consequences," the Soviet officials told reporters.

One of the officials, who visited Matchekhine at police headquarters, claimed the journalist had suffered physical violence during interrogation. Police denied the allegation, claiming Matchekhine hit his finger on a desk while being fingerprinted.

The embassy officials said Matchekhine was on a hunger strike and that the police department had refused to allow a Russian doctor to examine the journalist. Foreign ministry sources said the Soviet Embassy in Tokyo asked the ministry to find Matchekhine Thursday, claiming the journalist had disappeared.

The embassy sent an official to police headquarters after being informed of the arrest Friday. The official met with Matchekhine, according to the sources.

They said Soviet Embassy counsellor Victor Denisov subsequently visited the foreign ministry to ask for Matchekhine's release as soon as possible.

Drug smuggling on rise, difficult to stop: officials

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation is currently subject to "the highest level of smuggling since Prohibition Days," largely as a result of the ingenuity and sophistication of modern-day drug traffickers, U.S. Customs Service officials said Friday.

"There is literally an avalanche of narcotics and dangerous drugs being smuggled into this country by every conceivable means and method," said Customs Comr. Vernon Acree.

Heroin seizures by the service for the past 10 months are up 212 per cent over the same period last year. At the same time, seizures of marijuana, cocaine and hashish have also skyrocketed.

"Anything you can dream of these people use. It's just incredible. It's virtually impossible to contend with it," said Customs spokesman Edward Kittredge.

Special body corsages, animals such as donkeys and horses, false-bottomed suitcases, statuettes and furniture are popular carriers of illegal drugs, Kittredge said.

One young man died on a flight from Colombia to the United States when the plastic vial of cocaine he had swallowed burst.

Along the Mexican-American border, where the majority of the smuggling is taking place according to Kittredge, dope dealers employ a variety of methods to baffle the service.

"They'll use high-speed aircraft — like Lear jets — and fly over the border at tremendous speeds, maybe 50 feet off the ground, in the middle of the night. Then they'll land on a deserted airstrip or an old country road. We have random patrols, but what the hell can we do:" Kittredge said.

Kittredge estimated that "at the most" customs agents are able to nab one in 10 drug traffickers.

"It's amazing, just amazing," he said again.

Acree agreed. "The nation is experiencing the highest level of smuggling since Prohibition Days," he said.

by 75 per cent; we've got the strength to maintain the peace; we've restored the candor, openness . . . to the White House (and) we're on the road to a growing economy."

As if to further prove his mettle in national security affairs — Reagan's strongpoint so far—Ford, in Louisville Friday night, said he signed a bill allowing him to mobilize 50,000 military reservists to meet a specific military crisis.

Ford said he succeeded where previous administrations had failed in gaining an on-site nuclear inspection treaty with Moscow.

"I'm very proud of that nuclear test ban agreement because for the first time — through very sound and, I think, strong negotiating — I obtained for the United States the first opportunity to have on-site inspection in the Soviet Union," he said.

Reagan, who has won five of the past six primaries, was in Michigan, claiming to be the underdog to Ford and contending the administration's economic record is faltering.

"I am definitely an underdog," Reagan said. "This state is more vital to him than it is to me. No one could contemplate that I could be the favorite in an incumbent's home state."

In his speech to the Economic Club, Reagan said unemployment in Michigan is at 12.5 per cent and, "in fact, Michigan led the nation and suffered the worst unemployment in 1975. There has been much talk from Washington about an economic upturn," he said.

"I have warned for months that fighting recession without fighting inflation would only bring worst inflation down the line."

Palestinian Liberation Organization sources said troops of the Syrian-led Palestinian Liberation Army withdrew from battlegrounds in Tripoli late Friday, obeying orders from PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat.

But an all-day communications blackout with the northern port city made it impossible to confirm the report.

The truce called by Premier Rashid Karami, the 30th in Lebanon's 13-month civil war, was to have taken effect at midnight to end fighting that has killed at least 250 persons in two days.

But fierce clashes erupted anew in Beirut's battered port and commercial districts Saturday and artillery duels continued between Christian and Moslem villages of the eastern Mount Lebanon region.

A major battle raged in mountain district, where leftists and rightists traded heavy mortar fire in a resort area previously untouched by the war.

The new fighting was sparked by three-day clashes in Tripoli between Arafat's Al Fatah guerrillas and two pro-Syrian forces — the PLA and Saiqa guerrillas.

Arafat Friday ordered the PLA troops to withdraw from Tripoli to confront right-wing Christian forces in north Lebanon.

The PLA is ostensibly the military wing of the PLO, but most of its units have been stationed in Syria and are led by Syrian officers. Diplomatic sources said the PLO order was an open challenge to Damascus.

In another blow to Syria's faltering peace plans for Lebanon, PLO leaders Friday joined Lebanon's leftists in demanding an immediate withdrawal of Syrian forces from the war-ravaged country.

The hard-line Palestinian "rejection front" said Syrian troops and Saiqa units attacked Palestinian bases in a village near the Israeli border. They charged the pro-Syrian forces had launched a campaign to "liquidate" the Palestinians on orders from Damascus.

Rejection front leader George Habash appeared at a Beirut rally with leftist chief Kamal Jumblatt and declared, "the only role for the Palestinian resistance is to place every fighter, every bullet and every weapon in the service of the nationalist (leftist) cause."

I did nothing wrong: Callaway

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate hearings to determine whether Howard Callaway pressured the Forest Service into reversing a recommendation against expansion of his Colorado ski resort onto public land ended Friday with Callaway insisting he did no wrong.

"I think the evidence shows an attempt to influence," said Sen. Floyd Haskell, D-Colo., chairman of the subcommittee. "But it's an entirely different thing to know whether it was necessary."

Haskell said the evidence indicated Forest Service officials were not influenced by the former Army secretary's efforts to go over their heads.

But Callaway insisted he did nothing improper and asked that the committee — when it writes its report — "move away from innuendo and get to the facts."

Callaway said his involvement had been limited to a single phone call "when I felt we had been betrayed" by the Forest Service, which had recommended the ski resort not be allowed to use Snodgrass Mountain, near Callaway's Crested Butte ski resort.

"I hope I'll be looked at on my own and not be held responsible for what others did that I know nothing about," he said.

Callaway said he and his brother-in-law, Ralph Walton, had been "assured" their Crested Butte ski resort would be allowed to expand when they bought it in 1969. Under questioning, however, Callaway acknowledged there had been no formal understanding that would be allowed.

Callaway said his only phone call was to Deputy Agriculture Sec. Richard Ashworth — a fellow Georgian who had been Callaway's speech writer in an unsuccessful race for governor. That call, he said, was only to protest delays, not to ask for expansion.

Haskell, citing many contacts between Callaway and Agriculture Dept. officials, told Callaway it was "a little bit of an oversimplification to say that you made only one phone call."

Callaway admitted he discussed his problems with the Forest Service at a meeting in his Pentagon office with Ashworth, then Agriculture Undersecretary J. Phil Campbell — also a Georgian — and Associate Chief Rexford R. Resler of the Forest Service.

But he said the meeting — held on his last day as secretary — had been requested by them. Callaway was Army secretary until last July 3, resigning to become President Ford's campaign manager. He quit that post when Crested Butte became a public question.

Reagan tops Ford in campaign spending

President Ford and Ronald Reagan — the big spenders of the 1976 presidential season — are closing in on the $13 million spending limit with more than half the delegates yet to be picked, financial records showed Friday. Campaign finance reports filed with the Federal Election Commission showed Reagan has raised and spent nearly $9.5 million, while Ford has spent about $8.8 million.

Group warns against waxed produce

The shopper should know if the cucumbers, tomatoes and plums shining on the produce rack have been waxed to stop shrinkage and "add luster," a consumer group said Friday. Millions of pounds of waxed produce are sold yearly in apparent violation of federal regulations requiring the labeling of all "direct food additives," the Center for Science in the Public Interest said. "Waxes have not been tested to determine if they cause cancer, mutations, reproduction problems or other adverse effects," the privately funded research group told the Federal Drug Administration.

Banker gunned down in Paris

A young anarchist Friday shot and killed the president of France's second largest bank on a downtown Paris street and then committed suicide with a World War II German army pistol. Police said Jacques Chaine, 61, head of the state-owned Credit Lyonnais, was shot point-blank in the chest as he was getting out of his chauffeured limousine. Chaine struggled out of the car as a second shot grazed his wife's jaw. The assailant, identified by police as Jean Bilski, 22, then shot himself through the head with the 9mm pistol.

The work-release sentence would have allowed Bush to work for one year on a community newspaper without serving time in a regular prison cell. The U.S. Bureau of Prisons and U.S. Attorney Samuel Skinner opposed the work-release program on the grounds that convicted public officials should be sent to jail.

Soviet newsman charged in effort to buy secrets

TOKYO (UPI) — A Soviet newsman reported missing by his embassy was arrested on charges of trying to buy military information from a crewman aboard the U.S. Navy aircraft carrier Midway, Tokyo police said Friday.

Tokyo police announced the arrest just three hours before the new Soviet ambassador to Japan, Dmitri Polyansky, presented his credentials to Emperor Hirohito at the Imperial Palace. But political analysts said there was no evidence the announcement was timed to embarrass Polyansky or slight Moscow.

Matchekhine was apprehended Wednesday night as he left a downtown restaurant with the American sailor. Police withheld the name of the seaman and did not say whether he was cooperating with authorities.

Matchekhine is believed to have met the sailor about ten times, offering to pay him $1,000 for each piece of information concerning radar aircraft electronic apparatus, and military codes.

He reportedly met the sailor a year ago during a festival in Yokohama and subsequently befriended the seaman's family, entertaining them in restaurants and even giving their child a birthday gift.

Soviet embassy officials in Tokyo said his arrest was based on groundless "slander" by the American seaman and warned the matter could become a serious issue.

"Unless the Japanese authorities take proper action, the matter is going to become a serious issue and the Japanese authorities will have to take the responsibility for the consequences," the Soviet officials told reporters.

One of the officials, who visited Matchekhine at police headquarters, claimed the journalist had suffered physical violence during interrogation. Police denied the allegation, claiming Matchekhine hit his finger on a desk while being fingerprinted.

The embassy officials said Matchekhine was on a hunger strike and that the police department had refused to allow a Russian doctor to examine the journalist. Foreign ministry sources said the Soviet Embassy in Tokyo asked the ministry to find Matchekhine Thursday, claiming the journalist had disappeared.

The embassy sent an official to police headquarters after being informed of the arrest Friday. The official met with Matchekhine, according to the sources.

They said Soviet Embassy counsellor Victor Denisov subsequently visited the foreign ministry to ask for Matchekhine's release as soon as possible.

Drug smuggling on rise, difficult to stop: officials

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation is currently subject to "the highest level of smuggling since Prohibition Days," largely as a result of the ingenuity and sophistication of modern-day drug traffickers, U.S. Customs Service officials said Friday.

"There is literally an avalanche of narcotics and dangerous drugs being smuggled into this country by every conceivable means and method," said Customs Comr. Vernon Acree.

Heroin seizures by the service for the past 10 months are up 212 per cent over the same period last year. At the same time, seizures of marijuana, cocaine and hashish have also skyrocketed.

"Anything you can dream of these people use. It's just incredible. It's virtually impossible to contend with it," said Customs spokesman Edward Kittredge.

Special body corsages, animals such as donkeys and horses, false-bottomed suitcases, statuettes and furniture are popular carriers of illegal drugs, Kittredge said.

One young man died on a flight from Colombia to the United States when the plastic vial of cocaine he had swallowed burst.

Along the Mexican-American border, where the majority of the smuggling is taking place according to Kittredge, dope dealers employ a variety of methods to baffle the service.

"They'll use high-speed aircraft — like Lear jets — and fly over the border at tremendous speeds, maybe 50 feet off the ground, in the middle of the night. Then they'll land on a deserted airstrip or an old country road. We have random patrols, but what the hell can we do:" Kittredge said.

Kittredge estimated that "at the most" customs agents are able to nab one in 10 drug traffickers.

"It's amazing, just amazing," he said again.

Acree agreed. "The nation is experiencing the highest level of smuggling since Prohibition Days," he said.

Ford, Reagan talk on economy

As if to further prove his mettle in national security affairs — Reagan's strongpoint so far—Ford, in Louisville Friday night, said he signed a bill allowing him to mobilize 50,000 military reservists to meet a specific military crisis.

Ford said he succeeded where previous administrations had failed in gaining an on-site nuclear inspection treaty with Moscow.

"I am definitely an underdog," Reagan said. "This state is more vital to him than it is to me. No one could contemplate that I could be the favorite in an incumbent's home state."

In his speech to the Economic Club, Reagan said unemployment in Michigan is at 12.5 per cent and, "in fact, Michigan led the nation and suffered the worst unemployment in 1975. There has been much talk from Washington about an economic upturn," he said.

"I have warned for months that fighting recession without fighting inflation would only bring worst inflation down the line."

No malpractice compromise seen; new bill drawn

by STEVE BROWN

Despite three days of talks between lawyers and doctors over malpractice legislation, there now appears to be little chance they will reach a compromise.

The Herald has learned new legislation, prepared without the approval of the two groups, will be discussed next week. The new plan is expected to touch off new controversy within both professions.

Representatives of the Illinois State Medical Society and the Illinois Trial Lawyers Assn. met behind closed doors for three days in Springfield.

REPORTS FROM THE meetings indicate there was some agreement on issues considered "minor" in the malpractice controversy.

The Herald also has learned Rep. Leland Rayson, D-Tinley Park, is working on the new legislation.

The new bill, which will be discussed in the House Judiciary Committee's subcommittee on malpractice, will not include provisions that are favored by either doctors or lawyers. Rayson is chairman of the committee.

The bill reportedly will require the state to provide a malpractice-type insurance for doctors for awards over $500,000. The doctors will be required to purchase insurance to cover the first $500,000. The state also will require any payment it makes over the $500,000 mark to be limited to actual economic loss rather than claims for "pain and suffering."

APPARENTLY, lawyers and doctors were able to reach agreement on a statute of limitations of three years for malpractice suits. There also was agreement on legislation to permit doctors to file counterclaim lawsuits against persons who bring "frivolous suits."

Rayson said the legislation will not attempt to limit contingency fees received by lawyers who successfully bring malpractice suits. The doctors contend that in some cases lawyers, rather than the person injured, actually collect the bulk of a settlement. The doctors favored specific limits on the amount lawyers could collect.

Observers had indicated that if the doctors and lawyers, who represent powerful lobbying in the Illinois General Assembly, could agree on a bill, the legislation would stand an excellent chance of passage. With the apparent failure to reach a compromise, efforts to pass any legislation dealing with malpractice insurance problems will be extremely difficult, according to several legislators.

Nearly 1,000 doctors descended upon Springfield last week to lobby for passage of eight bills, which were introduced by House Majority Leader Gerald Shea, D-Riverside. Shea's bills, along with a "shell bill," are currently before the malpractice subcommittee. No action is expected on any of the legislation for at least two weeks.

High court rules malpractice law unconstitutional

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — The Illinois Supreme Court Friday ruled invalid the medical malpractice law on grounds awards may not be held to $500,000, doctors' premiums may not be prescribed by law and medical review panels may not use courtroom procedures.

The high court ruled both the $500,000 ceiling on malpractice awards and the provision freezing malpractice premiums at their June 10, 1975 level are violations of the constitutional ban on special class legislation.

The court found the $500,000 award ceiling "is arbitrary and constitutes a special law" and said frozen premiums unconstitutionality discriminate against insurance companies writing malpractice policies.

Dr. Joseph Skom, president of the Illinois State Medical Society, said he is "deeply disappinted" with the ruling. He urged all doctors to pressure their legislators into supporting other malpractice proposals now in the General Assembly.

The state medical society argued before the high court the legislature may "select one phase of one field and apply a remedy there, neglecting the others." Such an approach, the society said, was justified to do something about the skyrocketing cost of malpractice insurance.

The high court, however, rejected this argument. It also said the medical review panel, consisting of a judge, a doctor and a lawyer, "vests essentially judicial functions in nonjudicial personnel."

The medical review panel was set up to screen malpractice suits to weed out frivolous claims and settle others before they reached court.

However, the high court said, the law erred in giving the panel the right to use courtroom methods, such as the right to cross-examine and issue subpoenas.

The opinion did not say a medical review panel would be invalid under any circumstances. It may not, however, employ judicial methods.

Harper board wrapup

Fee jump to add $200,000 income

An approved $1 tuition hike at Harper college will generate about $212,730 in additional income for the school.

The boost from $14 to $15 was recommended last week by a trustee budget committee and was approved Thursday by the Harper Board of Trustees.

The new rate is effective with the school's 1976 summer session.

Reasons indicated by the trustees for the tuition increase included a decrease in state funding to the college and a slowdown in the growth of assessed valuation in the Harper district. Harper receives about one-third of its funding from student tuition and another third from the state.

Faculty appointments delayed

Trustees tabled recommended faculty appointments of M. Scott McMannis as division chairperson of the lifelong learning division and Kenneth V. Dahlberg as a full-time art instructor. Board member Robert A. Rausch said Friday he expects personnel for those positions to be announced by early June.

Color TV proposal OKd

A distribution plan for color television video instruction was approved at a maximum cost of $100,000.

According to a report compiled by Harper president Robert E. Lahti, 12 per cent of the present Harper video teaching selections are now in color. He said 71 new course program areas have requested color video tapes for use in the curriculum.

Lahti said advantages in switching to a totally color video teaching system included possibilities that a color system would motivate teacher instruction and that program tapes could be exchanged with area colleges that use color video selections.

Harper faculty votes AFT tie; recognition next

by DIANE GRANAT

The Harper College faculty, which decided last week to form a union, voted Friday to affiliate with the American Federation of Teachers.

In a vote to determine which national teachers' union will represent them, 98 faculty members cast ballots in favor of the AFT, 56 favored the National Education Assn., and 11 voted for the American Assn. of University Professors.

Affiliation with the AFT was endorsed by David Macaualay, president of the Harper Faculty Senate, who said the AFT "can provide the most support for the Harper faculty."

THE AFT, an affiliate of the AFL-CIO, currently has a chapter at Harper with about 25 members, but it does not have bargaining rights. Henry Roepken, a Harper professor and a member of the college's AFT chapter, said a drive now will begin to expand the chapter's membership to include about 100 faculty members.

William Schooley, chairman of the Harper AFT chapter said the union now will work to win recognition by the Harper Board of Trustees as the negotiating agent for the faculty.

"This could run anywhere from three months, six months to one year. It will depend on the reaction of the board," Schooley said.

The Harper board has not yet discussed recognition of the newly-formed faculty union, said Shirley Munson, board chairman. The faculty senate now represents the teachers in negotiations with the board.

Mrs. Munson said she was "extremely disappointed" the faculty decided to form a union.

"I felt we had been working very well with the senate in the past few years," Mrs. Munson said.

Andrews case still shrouded in mystery

by JOE SWICKARD

Six years have passed and the enigma of Edward and Sophia Andrews is yet to be unraveled.

Thousands of hours of police work have been spent interviewing hundreds of potential witnesses and following hundreds of leads that all went nowhere in futile attempts to learn what happened to Edward and Sophia Andrews of Arlington Heights, that warm May night in 1970.

It was May 15, 1970 and as was their custom, the Andrews drove together in their 1969 Oldsmobile to their jobs in the Look from their neat brick home on South Vail Avenue.

MRS. ANDREWS put in an apparently normal day at Local Loan Co., where she had worked for 27 years.

Andrews, manager of Miller Peerless Manufacturing Co., lunched with his brother-in-law, John Rynak. During the meal, Andrews reportedly complained of not feeling well. He returned to his office, but did no work the rest of the day.

The couple, both 62 years old, arrived as planned at a cocktail party sponsored by the Women's Auxiliary Beverage Institute, at the Sheraton-Chicago hotel on North Michigan Avenue at 6:15 p.m.

They stayed at the party until about 9:30 p.m. No one has seen them since.

WITNESSES VARY in their accounts of how much the couple had to drink and what affect the liquor had. But all agree that the couple got into their car and drove off onto the lower level of Michigan Avenue never to be seen again.

Rynak, the brother-in-law, called police on May 19 because he had not heard from the couple. Police, entering the house, found grapefruit rinds in the sink, clothes in the closet, money in the bank, but no people.

The Andrews were gone. They apparently never made it home from the hotel.

Police tried all the proven methods of tracing missing persons. "Stops" were placed on the credit cards and descriptions of the Andrews and their car were issued to police departments throughout the country.

Nothing came back.

Then Arlington Heights Police Sgt. Jay Plaisted was introduced to Carol Broman, a phychic.

What had the police to lose? All other leads and theories had produced nothing.

Mrs. Broman, speaking publicly for the first time about her role in the Andrews case, said she tried to pick up "vibrations" of the couple from examining a hair brush in their house.

SHE "SAW" THE ANDREWS murdered by a youth, possibly high on drugs, after an argument near a wooded area. The car, with their bodies inside, was sunk in a deep lake, Mrs. Broman said.

Police used scuba divers to search several lagoons in the area without success. But Mrs. Broman said she could never be certain where the lake she had "seen" is located.

"It was my greatest failure," Mrs. Broman said. "They never could find that body of water."

Police, however, have clung to another theory about another body of water: Lake Michigan.

DET. RONALD VAN RAALTE of Arlington Heights police said he believes that Andrews, possibly tipsy, drove into the Chicago River near the Michigan Avenue bridge. The car, the theory goes, either was crushed into the river's soft mud bottom or else carried into the lake in the backwash of a passing ship.

But several searches of the river and lake, the most recent one two years ago with the aid of electronic scanning devices, found no more than did all the others.

"It's the most baffling case I've ever encountered in my career as a police detective," Van Raalte said. "But I still think it was the river."

Capt. Maurice English said an air pocket inside the car could have provided enough buoyancy to allow it to be carried into the lake from the river.

"Its in the lake," English said. "The case is still active and receives periodic reviews," Van Raalte said.

"They'll be found. But it will be an accidental finding," Mrs. Broman said. "Somebody will be fishing or skindiving and they'll come across the car."

But when that discovery will come, no one knows — not English, Plaisted, Van Raalte or Mrs. Broman.

Dist. 25 wrapup

Boundary decision delayed for study

A decision whether to realign attendance boundaries in the North School area has been postponed until further study is made of traffic and safety conditions in the area.

The proposed boundaries plan transfers students now attending North School, which will close in June, to three other schools in the district. Students living east of Arlington Heights Road and north of Euclid Street would attend Olive School. Those east of Arlington Heights Road and south of Euclid Street would attend Windsor School, and those west of Arlington Heights Road would attend Ridge School.

Parent Ronald Patun presented the Dist. 25 Board of Education with a petition signed by 75 residents asking the board to revise the plan so that students west of Arlington Heights Road and north of Hawthorne would attend Olive School.

"We feel our children should go to the closest available school," he said. Under the proposed plan, students would walk eight-tenths of a mile, crossing between eight and 10 streets to Ridge School. Under the parent's plan, they would walk four-tenths of a mile, crossing three streets to Olive School, he said.

Students would cross Arlington Heights Road at a traffic signal under the parent's plan. "It is a hazard, but it is a known hazard," said Patun, whereas under the proposed plan students would cross many side streets that can be dangerous, particularly in the vicinity of Arlington High School.

If the board changes the boundaries in accordance with the parents' plan, however, Olive School would be overcrowded in the 1977-78 school year, if the board decides to close another school in the area. If the board closes an elementary school, particularly Wilson School, or if it closes a junior high school and transfers sixth graders to elementary schools, the average class size at Olive could go up to 32 students per class. Classroom capacity is about 30 students.

Board member Nicholas Raino said he would like to walk through North School area to observe traffic and safety conditions before making a decision on boundaries.

Personnel chief step-down OKd

The resignation of James Riebock, director of personnel in Dist. 25, has been accepted by the board of education.

Riebock is leaving the district to become superintendent of Palos Community Consolidated School Dist. 118 in the southwest suburb of Palos Park. His resignation is effective July 1. Riebock has been with the district seven years, serving as principal of Rand Junior High School and Berkley School from 1969 to 972.

The district will not replace Riebock, in an effort to reduce the administrative staff as a cost-saving measure. Many of Riebock's duties will be assumed by Gerald Williams, director of administration and planning.

Textbook fees unchanged

Textbook rental fees in Dist. 25 will remain the same next year, with kindergarten fees at $5 and a fee of $11 for grades one through eight.

The Illinois legislature had passed a free textbook plan to take effect in the coming school year. Because the state may not be able to fund the plan, the Illinois Office of Education advised the district to continue with its rental plan. If state funding is approved, the rental fees will be returned to parents.

Summer school figures lower

Preliminary summer school enrollment figures are substantially lower this year In Dist. 25 and some classes may be curtailed if more students do not register next week.

This year the district is offering a more limited program and for the first time in four years, tuition is being charged for summer school classes. In the past the program had been funded by the state, but this year state money may not be available.

Classes are being offered in remedial math, reading and language for $40, learning disabilities classes are $75 and classes in science, art, math and social studies are $75.

School officials had planned to offer classes at the four junior high schools, but may have to cut back on the number of locations and cancel some classes if enrollment is not sufficient. Residents may register for summer school until May 21 at the district offices, 301 W. South St., Arlington Heights.

Board representatives named

Dist. 25 Board Pres. Joan Klussmann has appointed board representatives for the coming school year.

Board member Edith Jolly was appointed to one of the newest positions as a resource person on the proposed formation of a unit school district in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 and High School Dist. 214. Mrs. Jolly will study the progress of the unit district formation and will study its impact on Dist. 25.

Board members Nicholas Raino and Mrs. Jolly were named to the negotiating committee for teachers contracts; Richard Soby will be the Northwest suburban Special Education Organization representative with James Foster as alternate; Bruce Chelberg will serve as liaison with the village board and Foster will serve as liaison with other local boards; Donald Gibbins will be in charge of communication with the community; Mrs. Klussmann will serve on the state's advisory committee on use of volunteers in schools and will be an alternate for Ed-Red, a legislative lobbying organization representing suburban schools.

4-way stop signs urged by panel

Four-way stop signs for the intersection of Grove Street and Waterman Avenue have been recommended by the Arlington Heights public health and safety committee, although the signs are not warranted under the police department's existing "hazard" criteria.

The village board will review the committee's recommendation Monday night. It has approved two other four-way stops in residential areas in recent months.

Approximately 25 residents appeared at the committee meeting Wednesday to ask for the additional signs, which they say are needed because of the large number of children crossing the intersection enroute to Kensington School, 201 S Evanston Ave.

Stop signs at the intersection now require Grove Street traffic to stop, but not Waterman Avenue Traffic.

Sgt. Jack Weber told the committee existing vehicle and pedestrian volumes do not warrant the four-way stop signs saying there have been only six accidents at the intersection since 1965. Five or more accidents a year would indicate a need for the signs, he said.

WEBET ALSO questioned whether the signs would make the intersection safer because of drivers who tend to "roll" through stop signs.

"Careful consideration must be given for putting up signs. We can't put them up unnecessarily because it's proven that motorists often ignore stop signs just because of their preponderance," Weber said.

"Stop signs are not intended to slow traffic. A stop sign is only to remove the right-of-way for a vehicle," he said.

ALTHOUGH NOT present at the meeting, Trustee Robert Miller has questioned whether the village should install stop signs when they do not meet state requirements.

"I'm concerned that the village might be legally liable for any damages or claims in such situations," Miller said.

He has asked the village to obtain an opinion on the subject from the state's attorney.

Trustees Alfred J. Barboro and Madeline Schroeder, members of the public health and safety committee, voted in favor of the request, although Barboro did say he was concerned about the number of stop sign requests the village board is receiving.

ed out by police, Chief Harry Jenkins said, "There has been too much information which has been erroneous, purely speculative and otherwise ill-advised — although well-intentioned — reported to the media."

The statement also indicated there was "no evidence to support any supposition that Mrs. Columbo was sexually assaulted." Several earlier published reports, attributed to police, said the woman was raped before her death.

The three were found shot, stabbed and beaten in their home, 55 E. Brantwood Dr. The family had also been tortured, police said.

The grand jury was scheduled to reconvene Monday morning.

Hersey student names Dist. 214

A Hersey High School student has been named the winner in the High School Dist. 214 "Project Image" contest to select a new name and insignia for the district.

John Savastio's logo and name, "Northwest Suburban High School Dist. 214," was selected by the Dist. 214 Board of Education. A plaque inscribed with the winner's name and details of the contest will be placed on display in the district's administration center.

About 110 insignias and 130 names were entered in the contest and were screened by an 11-member selection committee.

tables he would plant this season.

"Onions, beets, carrots, parsley, dill, small onions," he said indicating the individual rows.

"This year I put in some raw peanuts I got down in Florida. A lot of kids don't know how peanuts grow," he said.

Stucko said it takes hard work and a bit of luck to make the plants grow.

"YOU PUT IN THE seeds and wait for the good Lord's blessing," he said.

Henry Rogan Sr., was listening to the baseball game as he planted the dill seeds.

"This is a hobby with me now. I always had a garden. It goes back to when I was a boy in Wisconsin, but then a garden was a necessity," Rogan said.

He said you find good companionship among the gardeners. They exchange produce and hints freely.

"I DOUBT VERY much if many people here do it to save on the groceries. You have to have the inclination for it, not necessarily a green thumb. But you have to have the desire for it," he said.

Rogan said it is confusing why some one would vandalize the plots, a problem he notices last year.

"They pulled up the corn and knocked down the beans. "It's hard to understand why. I just don't get the connection," he said and covered the seeds with his hands.

CAPULLI AGAIN has a plot, as he has had most years. And he thinks he may know why others are drawn to gardening, too.

"People garden because they can see results," literally the fruits of their labor. So many times you can't see the result of what you do. It's beautiful to see the plants grow," he said.

There are still about 70 plots available. Sign up for them is taking place at Pioneer Park, 500 S. Fernandez Ave.

Cards, Knights and Falcons all reach MSL semis

by CHARLIE DICKINSON
Tennis Editor

The top three teams in the Mid-Suburban League, Arlington, Forest View and Prospect, flexed their tennis muscles Friday by placing all their competitors in the semi--final round of the conference meet.

The defending champion Arlington Cardinals may have the easier time of it today when the action resumes on the Wheeling High School courts at 9 a.m.

Forest View and Prospect will be facing each other in every bracket of the semi-finals and if the results of their regular season dual meet prevail (Prospect won that, 3-2) the Falcons could knock off Arlington's only remaining pursuer.

Palatine's Mike Esenberg whipped Hoffman Estates' Kent Karr and Fremd's Bob Milligan to join Arlington's Paul Wei, Prospect's Dan Hanson and Dave O'Donnell of Forest View in the No. 1 singles semis.

Fremd supplied the odd man to the No. 2 semi-finals when Mike Mitsch topped Palatine's Mike Stowe 7-5, 6-4 after getting a bye through the first round.

Mitsch, seeded third with a 9-3 record, will be joined by Prospect's Dave Hughson, Steve Calderone of Forest View and John Wallner of Arlington.

Steve Chelberg has not lost a game in the tournament as he byed through the first round then won his second round match 6-0, 6-0 to move to the semi-finals of No. 3 singles.

He will meet Forest View's Tom Kodadek in the semis. Kodadek also got a bye through the first round and then stopped the advance of Elk Grove's Gary Christiansen.

Palatine's Phil Groesbeck also reached the semi-finals, where he will tangle with Arlington's Pete Burkhardt.

Groesbeck downed Bob Bousman of Conant 6-0, 6-1 in the first round then handled Jeff Groover of Hersey 6-1, 6-1.

Burkhardt sat through the first round with a bye then swamped Wheeling's Marty Knutilla 6-1, 6-1 to reach the semis.

Hersey's only survivor through the first two rounds was the No. 1 doubles teams of Kip Hahn and Bill Rymsza.

They beat Buffalo Grove's George Bastable and Ed Harrison 6-2, 6-2 after advancing through the first round with a bye.

Joining the Harper pair in the semi-finals will be Todd Van Gorp and Mike Doering of Arlington, Jim Bryja and Paul Mallon of Prospect and Nick Kekos and Doug Majewski of Forest View.

Jeff and Rod Jay of Rolling Meadows won one of the tightest matches of the day to reach the semi-finals of No. 2 doubles.

After handling a Hersey pair in the first round the Jay brothers edged Jim Lillibridge and Mike Franzen of Palatine, 7-6, 7-6.

The Big Three's entries in the semi-finals are Blair Johnson and Bob Pionke of Arlington, Forest View's George Defotis and Dave Leahy and Dave Tambeaux and Mike Wood of Prospect.

Maine West advanced singles player Tom Gebhardt and the doubles team of Mike Hand and Tim Keenley through to the semi-finals in the Cenlrat Suburban League meet.

Gebhardt won his 20th match of the year over a Glenbrook South entrant after getting a bye through the first round of No. 3 singles.

In No. 1 doubles, Hand and Keenley are ranked first with an unblemished conference record. They reached the semi-finals with a first round bye and a 6-0, 6-2 in the second round.

Forest View lands another track title

by ART MUGALIAN

Steve Schellenberger and Mike Harvey were each good for a pair of first places as the Forest View Falcons made it look easy by coasting to their third straight outdoor track title in the Mid-Suburban boys finals at Palatine Friday night.

The victory, achieved with 60 total points, marked the first time an MSL team has taken three consecutive championships in the 14-year history of the league. Before Forest View, only Arlington and Palatine (twice) had captured back-to-back titles.

Fremd was second with 51 points, followed closely by Rolling Meadows (49½), Palatine (42½), Schaumburg (33) and Hoffman Estates (33).

Fremd edged Hersey by a point in the frosh-soph competition.

In all, seven varsity records were established in the meet, which began on Thursday with the finals of two events, the discus and the long jump. Included in that total was a record 8:03.2 by Hoffman in the two-mile relay, the first time the event was held.

Schellenberger and Harvey both set records Friday night in almost perfect track weather. Coach Bill Mohrmann's defending champs picked up seven first-place medals in all, including Harvey's long jump win on Thursday.

Schellenberger, the IHSA Class AA champion in the 880-run, burned off the rest of the competition in the 880 Friday, blazing across the finish line in 1:52.3. The time was a full second better than the old league mark, set by Bill Jarocki of Fremd in 1971, and is currently the state's fastest time.

Harvey bettered his own record in the triple jump with a leap of 45½ after going into the finals with a 43-footer. It was the best jump ever for the Falcon senior.

The biggest disappointment of the meet came in the 440-dash, where it was hoped perhaps three runners would go under :50. Instead, Schellenberger barely held off Rick Sutton of Rolling Meadows with a time of :50.05. Sutton ran :50.1.

Sutton turned in a pair of sparkling triumphs in the 100-dash and the 220. In the 100, the Mustang junior broke the tape in :10.1 to beat out Jim Vartanian of Forest View by less than a yard.

It was in the 220 that Sutton was most imprssive, however. He flew out of the blocks and scorched the top of the curve. With only Hoffman's Bill DiPuma anywhere near him, Sutton crossed the finish line in :22.3 for a new conference record, breaking the mark of :22.4 set by Schellenberger last year.

Vartanian had been trying for a super-human double after he had held off the challenge of Elk Grove's Pat O'Brien in the 120-yard high hurdles. Vartanian's winning time in the highs was :14.8 and O'Brien ran less than a tenth of a second behind. Vartanian's time in the 100 was :10.1+.

Forest View took first place in the shot put as Randy Gaitsch registered a 52-9, just three and a half inches better than Al DaValle of Fremd. Gaitsch made up for Thursday's disappointment when he failed to place in the discus.

Falcon distance runner Darryl Robinson was the victor in a photo-finish two-mile run ahead of Fremd soph Dan Inbody. Both were clocked in 9:37.6 and the Accutrack photo-timer was needed to pick a winner.

Schaumburg's Scott Mielke broke the conference record in the high jump with a 6-4 effort, then the Saxon senior returned to help his team take first place in the 880-yard relay in 1:33.

Jim Wright of Prospect, who was third in the high hurdles, came back for a record-breaking performance in the 330 lows. Wright was fast out of the blocks and led virtually all the way, winning in :38.8.

Fremd shaved two-tenths off the existing mark in the 440-yard relay as Dave Snow, Paul Passaglia, Dave Talaber, and Randy Polomsky ran :44.4 to beat Palatine by a tenth.

Palatine took a pair of firsts, including a 3:26.6 in the mile relay, beating Fremd by more than a full second. Palatine sophomore miler Tom Johnson ran his best time ever, 4:24.7, to hold off Tom Choice of Rolling Meadows (4:27.7) and soph Joe Schmidt of Buffalo Grove (4:29.8). Schmidt also took a second place behind Schellenberger in 1:59.8.

Hoffman's Dave Paape won the pole vault by clearing 13-9 on his last attempt. A minor injury forced him to pass up an attempt at 14-0.

STANDINGS: Forest View 69, Fremd 51, Rolling Meadows 49½, Palatine 42½, Schaumburg 33, Hoffman 33, Prospect 27½, Hersey 26½, Elk Grove 17, Buffalo Grove 13, Conant 6, Arlington 4, Wheeling 3.

Nancy Lachus tosses 2nd gem!

For the second time in two weeks, Forest View's Nancy Lachus pitched a no-hitter. She defeated hosting Rolling Meadows Friday, 16-0, in girls softball.

The only close call was a line drive to right by Bette Biacomino, but she was thrown out by outfielder Linda Butzen. Lachus fanned six.

Qualifying for state meet is girls' track goal today

by PAUL LOGAN

Although it sounds almost incredible, 85 girls' track and field teams will be trying to earn state meet berths at three area-hosted district meets today.

Entertaining a total of 29 teams — the largest gathering — will be Wheeling High School.

Prospect and Conant will have 28 each. Action gets underway at 9 a.m.

AT MOUNT PROSPECT

Of the 15 area teams spread over this trio of sites, Hersey appears to have the best chance of winning a team title. The huskies of Coach Claudia Olson carry the top seeds in five of the 16 individual and relay events at the Mount Prospect meet.

Hersey captured the Mid-Suburban League meet on Tuesday. The team will be led again by Kathy LaPorte — tops at Prospect in the long jump as well as both the 80 and 110 hurdles, high jumper Tricia Wurtz and the 440 relay team.

York and Maine East are right behind with three top performers each. (See accompanying district breakdowns by event.) Melody Miller, a state champion the last three years in events ranging from the 880 to the two-mile run, will be Maine's featured attraction.

Other local teams besides Prospect are Elk Grove, Maine West, Arlington and Forest View.

Forest View has two girls seeded first in field events — Debbie Brinkman in the shot put and Nancy Lancaster in the discus. The Falcons won the Prospect District last year.

AT HOFFMAN ESTATES

Rolling Meadows, winner of the Mid-Suburban's over-all team title, is one of the favorites at Conant High School's district.

Coach Joy Bundy's Mustangs will find three other teams with the same aspirations in Barrington, Palatine and Fremd.

Meadows top ranked are Bobbie Majikes in the 110 hurdles and the 880-relay team.

Fremd and Palatine also have two each. Joan Kelly paces Palatine in both the mile and two-mile events. Janet Fletcher dominates the 440 dash and the long jump for Fremd.

The other locals competing are Schaumburg, Sacred Heart, Hoffman Estates and Conant.

Figuring to dominate both the shot put and discus is Conant's Mary Ann Johnson. She leads the field in both. Johnson's looking to make her fourth trip to the Illinois finals, located in Charleston (May 21-22), and will be trying for her third straight shot put title.

Hoffman Estates led by Laura Buddenbaum, who shares the top-seeded time in the 80 hurdles with a Barrington hurdler.

Last year Conant won its own district.

AT WHEELING

Hosting Wheeling is expected to contend for the title against favored Evanston.

The Wildcats of Coach Donna Dubblede are led by Gail Miloch, who was superb in the MSL meet with two victories. She holds the top times in the 880 and the mile.

Other leaders are Bonnie Buenzow in the 440, the mile relay team and Sandy Rainey, who's tied for first with a girl from Libertyville.

Buffalo Grove's best performer is Bev Torain in the shot put.

by BOB GALLAS

Cubs relief pitcher Paul Reuschel, who was forced into another starting role Friday against the San Diego Padres, says he prefers the bullpen to the starting rotation. And the bullpen should look even better today.

Reuschel was touched for seven runs before he departed after 2-1/3 innings in the Cubs' 7-4 loss Friday to the Padres. And although Chicago relief work from there on in was superb, the Wrigley's just couldn't come back.

The parade of relievers in starting assignments will continue today, as manager Jim Marshall has tabbed Darold Knowles for his first National league start when the Cubs hook up for the second game of the San Diego series.

The Padres scored four runs in the second inning and three in the third on a total of nine hits, then were limited to just three hits the rest of the way by a triumverate of relievers, Oscar Zamora, Mike Garman and Bruce Sutter.

The Padres batted around to score four runs in the second on five hits, the big blow coming by Ted Kubiak, who tripled in two runs when the ball got past a diving Jose Cardenal in left. Three more Padre runs in the third in four successive hits after one was out chased Reuschel. Zamora retired the side and then the next six batters he faced.

The Cubs got two runs in the fifth when Steve Swisher, who nudged his average over .300 with a 2-for-4 out-

by CHARLIE DICKINSON
Tennis Editor

The top three teams in the Mid-Suburban League, Arlington, Forest View and Prospect, flexed their tennis muscles Friday by placing all their competitors in the semi--final round of the conference meet.

The defending champion Arlington Cardinals may have the easier time of it today when the action resumes on the Wheeling High School courts at 9 a.m.

Forest View and Prospect will be facing each other in every bracket of the semi-finals and if the results of their regular season dual meet prevail (Prospect won that, 3-2) the Falcons could knock off Arlington's only remaining pursuer.

Palatine's Mike Esenberg whipped Hoffman Estates' Kent Karr and Fremd's Bob Milligan to join Arlington's Paul Wei, Prospect's Dan Hanson and Dave O'Donnell of Forest View in the No. 1 singles semis.

Fremd supplied the odd man to the No. 2 semi-finals when Mike Mitsch topped Palatine's Mike Stowe 7-5, 6-4 after getting a bye through the first round.

Mitsch, seeded third with a 9-3 record, will be joined by Prospect's Dave Hughson, Steve Calderone of Forest View and John Wallner of Arlington.

Steve Chelberg has not lost a game in the tournament as he byed through the first round then won his second round match 6-0, 6-0 to move to the semi-finals of No. 3 singles.

He will meet Forest View's Tom Kodadek in the semis. Kodadek also got a bye through the first round and then stopped the advance of Elk Grove's Gary Christiansen.

Palatine's Phil Groesbeck also reached the semi-finals, where he will tangle with Arlington's Pete Burkhardt.

Groesbeck downed Bob Bousman of Conant 6-0, 6-1 in the first round then handled Jeff Groover of Hersey 6-1, 6-1.

Burkhardt sat through the first round with a bye then swamped Wheeling's Marty Knutilla 6-1, 6-1 to reach the semis.

Hersey's only survivor through the first two rounds was the No. 1 doubles teams of Kip Hahn and Bill Rymsza.

They beat Buffalo Grove's George Bastable and Ed Harrison 6-2, 6-2 after advancing through the first round with a bye.

Joining the Harper pair in the semi-finals will be Todd Van Gorp and Mike Doering of Arlington, Jim Bryja and Paul Mallon of Prospect and Nick Kekos and Doug Majewski of Forest View.

Jeff and Rod Jay of Rolling Meadows won one of the tightest matches of the day to reach the semi-finals of No. 2 doubles.

After handling a Hersey pair in the first round the Jay brothers edged Jim Lillibridge and Mike Franzen of Palatine, 7-6, 7-6.

The Big Three's entries in the semi-finals are Blair Johnson and Bob Pionke of Arlington, Forest View's George Defotis and Dave Leahy and Dave Tambeaux and Mike Wood of Prospect.

Maine West advanced singles player Tom Gebhardt and the doubles team of Mike Hand and Tim Keenley through to the semi-finals in the Cenlrat Suburban League meet.

Gebhardt won his 20th match of the year over a Glenbrook South entrant after getting a bye through the first round of No. 3 singles.

In No. 1 doubles, Hand and Keenley are ranked first with an unblemished conference record. They reached the semi-finals with a first round bye and a 6-0, 6-2 in the second round.

Steve Schellenberger and Mike Harvey were each good for a pair of first places as the Forest View Falcons made it look easy by coasting to their third straight outdoor track title in the Mid-Suburban boys finals at Palatine Friday night.

The victory, achieved with 60 total points, marked the first time an MSL team has taken three consecutive championships in the 14-year history of the league. Before Forest View, only Arlington and Palatine (twice) had captured back-to-back titles.

San Diego sets down Cubs, 7-4

by BOB GALLAS

Cubs relief pitcher Paul Reuschel, who was forced into another starting role Friday against the San Diego Padres, says he prefers the bullpen to the starting rotation. And the bullpen should look even better today.

Reuschel was touched for seven runs before he departed after 2-1/3 innings in the Cubs' 7-4 loss Friday to the Padres. And although Chicago relief work from there on in was superb, the Wrigley's just couldn't come back.

The parade of relievers in starting assignments will continue today, as manager Jim Marshall has tabbed Darold Knowles for his first National league start when the Cubs hook up for the second game of the San Diego series.

The Padres scored four runs in the second inning and three in the third on a total of nine hits, then were limited to just three hits the rest of the way by a triumverate of relievers, Oscar Zamora, Mike Garman and Bruce Sutter.

The Padres batted around to score four runs in the second on five hits, the big blow coming by Ted Kubiak, who tripled in two runs when the ball got past a diving Jose Cardenal in left. Three more Padre runs in the third in four successive hits after one was out chased Reuschel. Zamora retired the side and then the next six batters he faced.

The Cubs got two runs in the fifth when Steve Swisher, who nudged his average over .300 with a 2-for-4 out-

BEARDED BOB MASLIN of Harper became the N4C junior college conference champion in the pole vault in the finals at Harper. The former Wheeling High School athlete, shown here clearing 13-0, eventually reached 14 feet. Harper took three places in the vault and was second overall in the meet, which was won by a strong DuPage team.

Second leg today of Triple Crown

Kentucky Derby winner Bold Forbes and Honest Pleasure resume their rivalry for undisputed supremacy of this year's crop of 3-year-old thoroughbreds today in the 101st running of the Preakness in Baltimore.

A field of six is entered in Pimlico's second leg of the Triple Crown, but the 1-3/16th mile contest is expected to be a fierce wire-to-wire duel between the top two finishers in the Kentucky Derby.

E. Rodriguez Tizol's Bold Forbes beat Bert Firestone's Honest Pleasure by a length at Churchill Downs as the pair raced one-two the entire 1¼-mile route.

A trio of unsuccessful Derby entrants, Eugene Cashman's Elocutionist, Entrement's Cojak and Elmendorf's Play The Red, will give it a second go in the Preakness. Harbor View's Life's Hope, winner of Illinois Derby and running coupled with Bold Forbes as a Laz Barrera-trained entry, completes the Preakness field.

Finis wins Big 10 discus

Defending champion Illinois, aided by Jerry Finis' upset victory in the discus and a surprise second place by Dave Walters in the 10,000 meters, leaped in front of the 76th Big Ten outdoor track championship after the first three events Friday with 25 points. Co-favorites Michigan and Wisconsin trailed.

Finis, a Fremd High School product who was second in the state discus as a senior, whirled the college discus 161-feet 7-inches Friday to defeat Indiana's defending champion Greg Price, who finished second with 157-8.

Finis, also a football letterman, has been sharing his time this spring between the track and grid squad.

Illinois got another six points in the discus when Bob Carper took third at 150 feet 9 inches.

Mark Johnson of Wisconsin won the 10,000 meters and Indiana's Sylvester Wilson took the long jump at 24 feet 9 inches.

Cleveland, Phoenix win in NBA

Surprising Cleveland and Phoenix were the winners Friday night in National Basketball Assn. playoffs.

Bobby Smith hit a sizzling 13 of 17 shots from the floor to top 11 scorers with 27 points and pace the Cleveland Cavaliers to a 106-87 victory over the Boston Celtics in Richfield, Ohio.

Alvan Adams hit a layup with 12 seconds left and Gar Heard blocked a shot at the buzzer in Phoenix to give the Suns a 105-104 win over Golden State and send the NBA Western Conference finals into the deciding game Sunday at Oakland.

The Cleveland victory evened the Eastern Division champion playoff series at 2-2 with game five in Boston Sunday afternoon.

The Cavs, who led throughout most of the game, took a 73-70 lead into the fourth quarter but the Celtics got within two points 79-77 with eight minutes left before the Cavaliers went on a shooting spree.

Cleveland's Nate Thurmond, who has had a great series after being called in to replace the injured Jim Chones, kept Boston center Dave Cowens in check after the first half.

In Phoenix the Suns took an 85-78 lead into the fourth quarter and kept the advantage until Golden State went ahead 102-101 on a jump shot by Jamaal Wilkes with 1:4 left.

Paul Westphal hit for Phoenix, Phil Smith for Golden State, and Adams' layup came off an assist by Keith Erickson. Wilkes attempted a baseline jumper at the gun which was blocked by Heard.

Ali, Ken Norton to fight if . . .

Heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali will defend his title against Ken Norton for upwards of $7.5 million at Yankee Stadium in late September in a bout sponsored by Madison Square Garden, Ali's manager said Friday.

Manager Herbert Muhammad said Ali will get 50 per cent of the fight proceeds and expects "conservatively" the champ's share will reach the $9 million figure.

"This could be . . . very likely will be Ali's biggest paycheck," said John Condon, vice president in charge of boxing at the Garden. "With closed circuit television and all, it could reach that proportion ($9 million.)"

The fight is conditional on Ali beating European champion Richard Dunn of Britain in Munich May 25. Ali was guaranteed $1.6 million for that fight and a further $6 million for a bout against Japanese wrestler Antonio Inoke in Tokyo in June.

It will be the third and rubber meet between Ali and Norton, one of just two men to have beaten Ali.

And in other sports news . . .

Lee Trevino ripped apart one of the toughest courses in the country Friday to take a one-shot lead after two rounds of the Colonial National Invitation in Fort Worth, Tex. . . . Trevino birdied six of the final seven holes, produced a back-nine record of 29 and fired a six-under 64 for a two-round total of 132 and shot lead over Miller Barber . . . A season high of 38 cars took to the Indianapolis oval in hectic practice runs Friday . . . Johnny Rutherford, one of the top favorites for the 500 pole, again logged the best speed at nearly 189 miles per hour.

West, St. Viator in league meets

Track teams from Maine West and St. Viator will both be competing in conference meets today, but their goals will be widely disparate.

The Maine West Warriors are aiming high — for a third straight Central Suburban League outdoor boys title and a flying start for next week's district qualifying meet at Glenbrook South.

Today's CSL conference meet at Glenbrook North, which will begin at 10 a.m., finds Maine West the strong favorite and Maine East a formidable foe.

St. Viator's Lions, meanwhile, will have their hands full trying to score in a selected number of events in the East Suburban Catholic League meet, starting at 11 a.m. at Marist High School.

Coach Ron Brown's Maine West squad has already added several first-place trophies to its bulging showcase. The first of those was the CSL indoor championship trophy.

Key athletes for Maine West will be high jumper-triple jumper Mike Klebe, distance runners Jeff Brydges, Brian Tolan and Bob Pawelko, hurdlers Joe Farrell and Paul Lippold, pole vaulters Jim Winiecki and Joe Genualdi, and sprinters Scot Unger and Tony Krainik.

The Warriors recently captured 13 first places in the Titan Invitational at Glenbrook South.

Maine East is led by a fine corps of distance men, including state-contender Mark Tomasik in the two-mile and John Hinterhauser and Dave Saethre, both of whom are among the top milers in Illinois. Demon discus thrower Craig Franklin will be up among the top in his event, too.

St. Viator's outdoor track program suffers from a lack of facilities, but that fact alone doesn't prevent the Lions from turning out at least a couple of conference threats each year.

The Lion trackman with perhaps the best chance of breaking into the winner's column today is senior half-miler Steve Kastner, whose best time of 1:59.4 at the Falcon Invitational last week was good for a fourth place behind defending state champ Steve Schellenberger of Forest View.

St. Viator sophomore miler Dave Efken will also be rated among the favorites in his distance specialty after he clocked a 4:32.3 last week.

Jack Gracheck is the Lions' top 440-man and could be expected to score in the conference meet.

Cubs, Sox stumble again

ing, singled and Dave Roseello doubled to put runners at second and third.

With two out, Mike Adams, filling for a flu-weakened Rick Monday, walked to fill the bases. Cardenal followed with a two-run single just off the glove of shortstop Enzo Hernandez.

With runners at first and third, Bill Madlock popped up to end the inning. The Cubs added another run in the eighth when they touched Padre relieve Butch Metzger for the first earned run scored off him all year after 20 innings. Cardenal walked to open the frame, stole second, then scored two outs later on Andy Thornton's single to left.

The Cubs added one more in the ninth when Cardenal singled in Swisher.

Brent Strom started for the Padres and got the win his fourth in five decisions. Reuschel, now 1-1, who made his first start of the year May 2 at San Francisco, got the loss as his ERA ballooned to 7.76.

ROYALS STREAKING

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — Amos Otis slammed a two-run homer and unbeaten Al Fitzmorris pitched a seven-hitter Friday night to send the streaking Kansas City Royals off to a 7-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox.

The Royals, winners of four straight games and 10 of their last 12, took a 3-0 lead in the first inning when Otis hit his sixth homer after a single by Tom Poquette. John Mayberry followed the homer with a double, moved to third on a flyout and scored on Al Cowens' infield single.

Kansas City added another run in the second and then made it 7-0 in the seventh with a rally which included Frank White's third hit and second RBI of the game. White entered the game with a .152 batting average.

Ralph Garr's eighth inning sacrifice fly accounted for Chicago's only run against Fitzmorris, 4-0.

Second leg today of Triple Crown

Kentucky Derby winner Bold Forbes and Honest Pleasure resume their rivalry for undisputed supremacy of this year's crop of 3-year-old thoroughbreds today in the 101st running of the Preakness in Baltimore.

A field of six is entered in Pimlico's second leg of the Triple Crown, but the 1-3/16th mile contest is expected to be a fierce wire-to-wire duel between the top two finishers in the Kentucky Derby.

E. Rodriguez Tizol's Bold Forbes beat Bert Firestone's Honest Pleasure by a length at Churchill Downs as the pair raced one-two the entire 1¼-mile route.

A trio of unsuccessful Derby entrants, Eugene Cashman's Elocutionist, Entrement's Cojak and Elmendorf's Play The Red, will give it a second go in the Preakness. Harbor View's Life's Hope, winner of Illinois Derby and running coupled with Bold Forbes as a Laz Barrera-trained entry, completes the Preakness field.

Finis wins Big 10 discus

Defending champion Illinois, aided by Jerry Finis' upset victory in the discus and a surprise second place by Dave Walters in the 10,000 meters, leaped in front of the 76th Big Ten outdoor track championship after the first three events Friday with 25 points. Co-favorites Michigan and Wisconsin trailed.

Finis, a Fremd High School product who was second in the state discus as a senior, whirled the college discus 161-feet 7-inches Friday to defeat Indiana's defending champion Greg Price, who finished second with 157-8.

Finis, also a football letterman, has been sharing his time this spring between the track and grid squad.

Illinois got another six points in the discus when Bob Carper took third at 150 feet 9 inches.

Mark Johnson of Wisconsin won the 10,000 meters and Indiana's Sylvester Wilson took the long jump at 24 feet 9 inches.

Cleveland, Phoenix win in NBA

Surprising Cleveland and Phoenix were the winners Friday night in National Basketball Assn. playoffs.

Bobby Smith hit a sizzling 13 of 17 shots from the floor to top 11 scorers with 27 points and pace the Cleveland Cavaliers to a 106-87 victory over the Boston Celtics in Richfield, Ohio.

Alvan Adams hit a layup with 12 seconds left and Gar Heard blocked a shot at the buzzer in Phoenix to give the Suns a 105-104 win over Golden State and send the NBA Western Conference finals into the deciding game Sunday at Oakland.

The Cleveland victory evened the Eastern Division champion playoff series at 2-2 with game five in Boston Sunday afternoon.

The Cavs, who led throughout most of the game, took a 73-70 lead into the fourth quarter but the Celtics got within two points 79-77 with eight minutes left before the Cavaliers went on a shooting spree.

Cleveland's Nate Thurmond, who has had a great series after being called in to replace the injured Jim Chones, kept Boston center Dave Cowens in check after the first half.

In Phoenix the Suns took an 85-78 lead into the fourth quarter and kept the advantage until Golden State went ahead 102-101 on a jump shot by Jamaal Wilkes with 1:4 left.

Paul Westphal hit for Phoenix, Phil Smith for Golden State, and Adams' layup came off an assist by Keith Erickson. Wilkes attempted a baseline jumper at the gun which was blocked by Heard.

Ali, Ken Norton to fight if . . .

Heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali will defend his title against Ken Norton for upwards of $7.5 million at Yankee Stadium in late September in a bout sponsored by Madison Square Garden, Ali's manager said Friday.

Manager Herbert Muhammad said Ali will get 50 per cent of the fight proceeds and expects "conservatively" the champ's share will reach the $9 million figure.

"This could be . . . very likely will be Ali's biggest paycheck," said John Condon, vice president in charge of boxing at the Garden. "With closed circuit television and all, it could reach that proportion ($9 million.)"

The fight is conditional on Ali beating European champion Richard Dunn of Britain in Munich May 25. Ali was guaranteed $1.6 million for that fight and a further $6 million for a bout against Japanese wrestler Antonio Inoke in Tokyo in June.

It will be the third and rubber meet between Ali and Norton, one of just two men to have beaten Ali.

And in other sports news . . .

Lee Trevino ripped apart one of the toughest courses in the country Friday to take a one-shot lead after two rounds of the Colonial National Invitation in Fort Worth, Tex. . . . Trevino birdied six of the final seven holes, produced a back-nine record of 29 and fired a six-under 64 for a two-round total of 132 and shot lead over Miller Barber . . . A season high of 38 cars took to the Indianapolis oval in hectic practice runs Friday . . . Johnny Rutherford, one of the top favorites for the 500 pole, again logged the best speed at nearly 189 miles per hour.

West, St. Viator in league meets

Track teams from Maine West and St. Viator will both be competing in conference meets today, but their goals will be widely disparate.

The Maine West Warriors are aiming high — for a third straight Central Suburban League outdoor boys title and a flying start for next week's district qualifying meet at Glenbrook South.

Today's CSL conference meet at Glenbrook North, which will begin at 10 a.m., finds Maine West the strong favorite and Maine East a formidable foe.

St. Viator's Lions, meanwhile, will have their hands full trying to score in a selected number of events in the East Suburban Catholic League meet, starting at 11 a.m. at Marist High School.

Coach Ron Brown's Maine West squad has already added several first-place trophies to its bulging showcase. The first of those was the CSL indoor championship trophy.

Key athletes for Maine West will be high jumper-triple jumper Mike Klebe, distance runners Jeff Brydges, Brian Tolan and Bob Pawelko, hurdlers Joe Farrell and Paul Lippold, pole vaulters Jim Winiecki and Joe Genualdi, and sprinters Scot Unger and Tony Krainik.

The Warriors recently captured 13 first places in the Titan Invitational at Glenbrook South.

Maine East is led by a fine corps of distance men, including state-contender Mark Tomasik in the two-mile and John Hinterhauser and Dave Saethre, both of whom are among the top milers in Illinois. Demon discus thrower Craig Franklin will be up among the top in his event, too.

St. Viator's outdoor track program suffers from a lack of facilities, but that fact alone doesn't prevent the Lions from turning out at least a couple of conference threats each year.

The Lion trackman with perhaps the best chance of breaking into the winner's column today is senior half-miler Steve Kastner, whose best time of 1:59.4 at the Falcon Invitational last week was good for a fourth place behind defending state champ Steve Schellenberger of Forest View.

St. Viator sophomore miler Dave Efken will also be rated among the favorites in his distance specialty after he clocked a 4:32.3 last week.

Jack Gracheck is the Lions' top 440-man and could be expected to score in the conference meet.

Cubs, Sox stumble again

ing, singled and Dave Roseello doubled to put runners at second and third.

With two out, Mike Adams, filling for a flu-weakened Rick Monday, walked to fill the bases. Cardenal followed with a two-run single just off the glove of shortstop Enzo Hernandez.

With runners at first and third, Bill Madlock popped up to end the inning. The Cubs added another run in the eighth when they touched Padre relieve Butch Metzger for the first earned run scored off him all year after 20 innings. Cardenal walked to open the frame, stole second, then scored two outs later on Andy Thornton's single to left.

The Cubs added one more in the ninth when Cardenal singled in Swisher.

Brent Strom started for the Padres and got the win his fourth in five decisions. Reuschel, now 1-1, who made his first start of the year May 2 at San Francisco, got the loss as his ERA ballooned to 7.76.

Four area teams play in regional tournaments

And then there were 128 . . .

This is all that remains of some 550 baseball teams that started off on the playoff trail a little more than a week ago, aiming ultimately at a berth in the Illinois High School Association's state diamond finals in Peoria next month.

Four of those schools still alive are Mid-Suburban league outfits, having emerged from district competition at Forest View, Rolling Meadows, Hoffman Estates and Highland Park earlier in the week. They will now travel to widely separated sites Saturday to participate in four-team regional tournaments.

Here's the lineup:

At Maine South

Hersey and Rolling Meadows, on the strength of superlative pitching performances, ousted Arlington and Maine West respectively Wednesday to earn a crack at one another in opening round Hawk regional action. The tourney, originally slated for Maine West, feeds into a sectional fray at Glenbrook North next week.

The Huskies and Mustangs will collide at 1 p.m. Saturday, following a 10 a.m. lidlifter between the hosting Hawks and Gordon Tech. The two winners are then slated to pair off Monday at 4 p.m., weather permitting.

At Lake Park

Palatine nudged Fremd 4-3 at Hoffman Estates to earn their berth in the Lancer regional and they'll now face Glenbard West in Saturday's 10 a.m. opener. Glenbard West bettered Glenbard South to gain their entrance to the regional.

Lake Park's nightcap Saturday will pit Wheaton Warrenville against the winner of the Batavia district. The two Saturday victors clash Monday at 4 p.m. with the winner moving on the sectional combat Crown.

At North Chicago

It took Wheeling three triumphs in the Highland Park district to earn a shot at Libertyville Saturday. The two Wildcat nines will collide at 10 a.m. A second game in the Warhawk tournament will begin at 2 p.m. with Waukegan East taking on Grant and the finals are scheduled for 4 p.m. Monday.

The winner at North Chicago also advances to Glenbrook North, where they will face the Maine South regional champ on May 22.

Arlington socks Hoffman

A Herald Staff Report

In what could possibly be the Mid-Suburban League championship baseball matchup, the North Division leading Arlington Cardinals romped to a 9-1 victory over the hosting Hoffman Estates Hawks, leaders of the South Division, Friday.

Mike Mayerck capped a seven-run first inning for the Cardinals with a grand slam. John Vukovich doubled in two more in the third to ice the game for starting and winning pitcher John Mertins.

Mertins bested Hoffman ace Ray Gawron, who gave up all the runs, seven of which were earned. Mertins struck out six and walked just one. Gawron struck out two and walked six.

HUSKIES CHECK FOREST VIEW

Hersey bunched three of their five hits together in the fifth inning to overcome a 1-0 Forest View lead and claim their eighth straight victory on the Falcon diamond Friday, 3-1.

Junior righty Kurt Wagner, with relief aid from Todd Walker, notched his first conference win while the Huskies were upping their conference mark to 6-2 and keeping pace with loop-leading Arlington. Joe Slawinski, the second of three Forest View hurlers, absorbed the loss.

The hosts had jumped on top in the first frame on singles by Jim Petran and Larry Dahl, a passed ball and Dave Fulton's sacrifice fly. Hersey countered on a base hit by Bob Hart, walks to Steve Giannini and Brian Hastings, a two-run single by Bob Frye and a one-run single by Mark Knuttel.

BISON BELT KNIGHTS

Buffalo Grove erupted for eight hits and five runs in the third inning and then coasted to an 8-2 triumph over hosting Prospect Friday.

Tim Prokof's two-run double spearheaded the big Bison rally, which also included a walk, an error, a wild pitch and a passed ball. Buffalo Grove had previously gone ahead 1-0 in the top of the first when Mike Ledna was hit by a pitch, advanced on a sacrifice and a ground out and scored on an error.

Ledna, who finished three-for-four, also singled home a run in the fifth after Dave Martin and Bill Donato picked up their second hits of the game.

Mike Marshall capped Bison scoring with a sacrifice fly. The soph twirler later saw his own shutout bid spoiled when pinch-hitting Kirk Lebica unloaded one of his fast balls over the fence in right after Dave Thoma had walked.

Marshall still logged his fourth straight loop win, fanning eight in the process. Knight starter Kevin MacBride was tagged with the loss.

MEADOWS CLAWS 'CATS

Rolling Meadows tuned up for Saturday's regional action by bumping off another regional contender — Wheeling — 8-5 on the Wildcat diamond Friday afternoon.

Mike Bramlett's bases loaded single in the fifth helped break open a 1-1 deadlock and propel Mustang starter Gary Adams to his second loop triumph of the season. Glenn Barry was the losing twirler.

Both sides scored without benefit of a hit in the first. Paul Marsillo walked, stole second and third and tallied on a fielder's choice for the visitors. Bucky Black walked, advanced on a wild pitch and fielder's choice and was sent home on Rick Heredia's sacrifice fly for the hosts.

Barry doubled in a run and Black singled in another as the Wildcats rallied back within a run of Meadows. Guy Tenuta's two-run base rap iced things up for the Mustangs in the sixth however.

Zara fanned 10 and had a three-for-four day at the plate in gaining his first loop triumph. The only two hits by the Saxons were both punched out by Dave Jones.

The Pirates meanwhile came up with a 13-hit attack. Bill Odell, Bruce Peterson and Bill Mottashed each chipped in with a pair of safties.

West maintains South lead, 7-0

The Maine West Warriors kept a stranglehold on first place in the Central Suburban League South division baseball race with a 7-0 win over visiting Maine East Friday.

Buddy Doroskin shut out East on just four hits, striking out 10 while walking four. The Warriors are now 12-4 on the season, and hold a two-game lead in the South division with an 8-2 conference mark.

The Warriors scored all the runs they needed in the third when they scored six. Maine West added a run in the sixth.

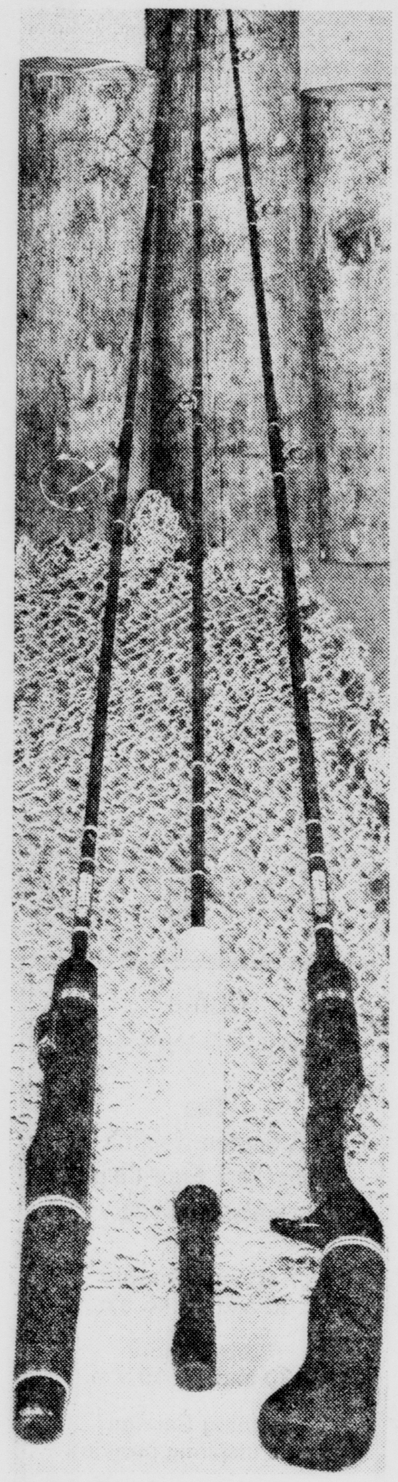
On the eve of the Minnesota opener

Anglers armed with sonar units



GRAPHITE fishing rods offer more sensitivity than glass or fiberglass poles, but they are far from indestructible. With some models commanding over $100, the graphite rod remains a luxury to most fishermen.

Carrying the triumphant banner, Vexilar, Inc., local manufacturers of the graph recorder, argues that the instrument has been very beneficial to the DNR in monitoring, tracking and netting rough fish and to rescue game fish from winter kill lakes.

Also brought to the attention by Vexilar is the fact that the recorder minimizes wasted time and motion. It therefore conserves gas and oil, fuel resources that are not renewable.

Food and lodging were provided by Grandview Lodge in cooperation with the Minnesota Dept. of Economic Development.

Lee Rudsenske, headwaters guide in Park Rapids, Minn., said, "As we sell more tools to the fishermen, our state benefits from the tax income. Many dollars are put back into the hunting and fishing programs, making things better for the sportsmen."

Skip Christman, a guide from the Twin Cities, concurs. "I agree that 'location' is 60 per cent or more of fishing. But, remember, for the successful fisherman, location is determined by topographical maps and past experience before he leaves the dock.

"Sonar devices, flashers and graphs only help him find the location he has already chosen with accurate reliability. Much of the mystery, challenge and sport of location is predetermined on the lake map and depends on fishermen's skill and knowledge."

Don Bonneau, supervisor of fisheries management from the Iowa Conservation Commission, summed the situation up this way:

"We feel the best method of fisheries management is to manage the fish and not the fishermen."

Maybe manufacturers should devise a chart recorder for finding rain.

Goose harvest up in quota zone

Goose hunters made 44,310 trips to harvest 25,075 Canada geese in the southern Illinois four-county quota zone in 1975 for .57 daily success rate.

The harvest exceeded the quota by 3,075 birds, due to problems associated with closing on a weekend, long range projection and weather change which all added to the harvest.

An average of 1,477 hunters sought geese daily. The two public shooting areas accounted for 16 per cent of the harvest with a daily success average of .40.

Alexander County hunters took 37 per cent of the harvest with .55 success ratio; Union County shooters took 34 per cent of the birds with .80 success ratio and Williamson-Jackson County hunters took 29 per cent of the birds with .43 success ratio.

Williamson-Jackson had 16,779 hunter days of use, Alexander County recorded 16,680 and Union had 10,851. The .57 hunter success was a 16 per cent increase over 1974 daily success rate.

HERALD OUTDOOR Editor Jim Cook shades sun from controversial sonar depth sounder on eve of 1976 Minnesota fishing opener Friday on Gull Lake in Minnesota. Legislation to ban chart recorders was defeated earlier in the year.

Breaking the graphite rod myth

by VIC WATIA

The fisherman who lays out a bundle of money for a top-name graphite fishing rod under the impression he's getting an indestructible piece of equipment is in for a surprise.

True, graphite rods may offer more strength with less weight and improved sensitivity when it comes to fishing. But indestructible they are not.

Perhaps the reputation of the strength of graphite is partially to blame. Graphite, which consists of specially treated carbon fibers, has been adapted to replace metals in some airplane parts and for other modern-day wonders where exceptional strength and light material is needed.

But fishing rods, regardless of what they are made of, aren't intended to withstand such abuse.

No doubt rod companies could produce indestructible fishing wands out of this material, but they'd be useless.

Also, fishermen are partially to blame for misleading impressions about graphite passed on to other anglers.

Bragging about huge fish caught on ultralight graphite rods adds to the image that the rod is nearly indestructible.

For those who haven't explored graphite rods, they are thinner than fiberglass rods. The carbon fibers don't give or stretch as much as fiberglass, which means the rod doesn't have to bend as far during casting.

Also, the thinness of the rod allows even the slightest vibrations to be transmitted completely through the length of the rod to the handle, meaning the angler can detect even slight hits.

However, the simple fact that the rods are thinner should tell the angler that care should be taken in storing and treatment.

A thick fiberglass rod may withstand some good knicks, gouges, scratches or small surface cracks and still hold up for awhile, but such abuse is amplified on the graphite rod simply because of the smaller diameter of the shaft.

A graphite rod will withstand its share of punishment, just as any fine piece of equipment. But that doesn't mean the angler should carelessly toss it about in a boat, step on it or let it bounce around in the back of a pickup truck or the trunk of a car without some protection.

The fisherman who has little respect for his equipment is best off buying cheaper rods until he grows up, and shouldn't try to put the blame on rod manufacturers.

"Most of the broken graphite rods returned to us," a spokesman for one manufacturer commented, "was the fault of the fisherman. The rod failed simply from abuse. We replaced them as a matter of good public relations, but nobody could have blamed us if we didn't."

For the angler willing to shell out the money, a good quality graphite rod can offer increased handling ease and sensitivity.

But those looking for an indestructible fishing rod had better wait. It hasn't been developed yet.

Ducks stump fox

Two employes of the U. S. Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife reported in a biological journal that ducks sometimes outsmart foxes by feigning death when attacked.

Alan B. Sargeant and Lester E. Eberhardt said that in 1971 researchers observed captive red foxes preying on about 50 adult ducks of five species at the Northern Prairie Wildlife Research Center in Jamestown, N. D., and found the ducks played dead and waited for a chance to escape.

Twenty-nine birds were known to have feigned death — some for as long as 14 minutes. All 29 survived, the report said, though "gentle prey-handling" by the foxes seemed greatly responsible.

The researchers said "few death-feigning ducks would escape when food is scarce or foxes are hungry" and that the tactic would not work "against predators that kill or cripple prey immediately."

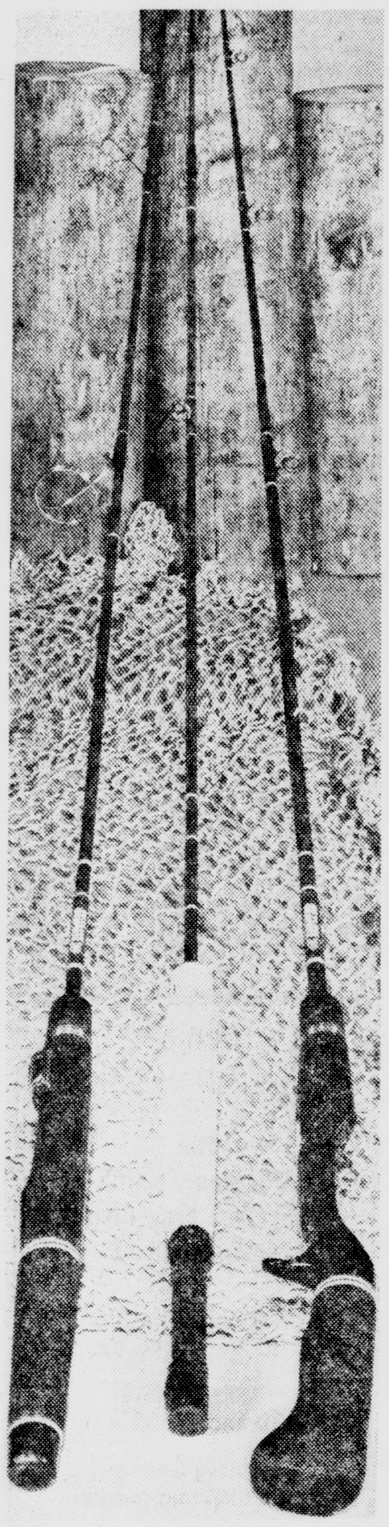
Anglers armed with sonar units



GRAPHITE fishing rods offer more sensitivity than glass or fiberglass poles, but they are far from indestructible. With some models commanding over $100, the graphite rod remains a luxury to most fishermen.

Carrying the triumphant banner, Vexilar, Inc., local manufacturers of the graph recorder, argues that the instrument has been very beneficial to the DNR in monitoring, tracking and netting rough fish and to rescue game fish from winter kill lakes.

Also brought to the attention by Vexilar is the fact that the recorder minimizes wasted time and motion. It therefore conserves gas and oil, fuel resources that are not renewable.

Food and lodging were provided by Grandview Lodge in cooperation with the Minnesota Dept. of Economic Development.

Lee Rudsenske, headwaters guide in Park Rapids, Minn., said, "As we sell more tools to the fishermen, our state benefits from the tax income. Many dollars are put back into the hunting and fishing programs, making things better for the sportsmen."

Skip Christman, a guide from the Twin Cities, concurs. "I agree that 'location' is 60 per cent or more of fishing. But, remember, for the successful fisherman, location is determined by topographical maps and past experience before he leaves the dock.

"Sonar devices, flashers and graphs only help him find the location he has already chosen with accurate reliability. Much of the mystery, challenge and sport of location is predetermined on the lake map and depends on fishermen's skill and knowledge."

Don Bonneau, supervisor of fisheries management from the Iowa Conservation Commission, summed the situation up this way:

"We feel the best method of fisheries management is to manage the fish and not the fishermen."

Maybe manufacturers should devise a chart recorder for finding rain.

Goose harvest up in quota zone

Goose hunters made 44,310 trips to harvest 25,075 Canada geese in the southern Illinois four-county quota zone in 1975 for .57 daily success rate.

The harvest exceeded the quota by 3,075 birds, due to problems associated with closing on a weekend, long range projection and weather change which all added to the harvest.

An average of 1,477 hunters sought geese daily. The two public shooting areas accounted for 16 per cent of the harvest with a daily success average of .40.

Alexander County hunters took 37 per cent of the harvest with .55 success ratio; Union County shooters took 34 per cent of the birds with .80 success ratio and Williamson-Jackson County hunters took 29 per cent of the birds with .43 success ratio.

Williamson-Jackson had 16,779 hunter days of use, Alexander County recorded 16,680 and Union had 10,851. The .57 hunter success was a 16 per cent increase over 1974 daily success rate.

HERALD OUTDOOR Editor Jim Cook shades sun from controversial sonar depth sounder on eve of 1976 Minnesota fishing opener Friday on Gull Lake in Minnesota. Legislation to ban chart recorders was defeated earlier in the year.

Breaking the graphite rod myth

by VIC WATIA

The fisherman who lays out a bundle of money for a top-name graphite fishing rod under the impression he's getting an indestructible piece of equipment is in for a surprise.

True, graphite rods may offer more strength with less weight and improved sensitivity when it comes to fishing. But indestructible they are not.

Perhaps the reputation of the strength of graphite is partially to blame. Graphite, which consists of specially treated carbon fibers, has been adapted to replace metals in some airplane parts and for other modern-day wonders where exceptional strength and light material is needed.

But fishing rods, regardless of what they are made of, aren't intended to withstand such abuse.

No doubt rod companies could produce indestructible fishing wands out of this material, but they'd be useless.

Also, fishermen are partially to blame for misleading impressions about graphite passed on to other anglers.

Bragging about huge fish caught on ultralight graphite rods adds to the image that the rod is nearly indestructible.

For those who haven't explored graphite rods, they are thinner than fiberglass rods. The carbon fibers don't give or stretch as much as fiberglass, which means the rod doesn't have to bend as far during casting.

Also, the thinness of the rod allows even the slightest vibrations to be transmitted completely through the length of the rod to the handle, meaning the angler can detect even slight hits.

However, the simple fact that the rods are thinner should tell the angler that care should be taken in storing and treatment.

A thick fiberglass rod may withstand some good knicks, gouges, scratches or small surface cracks and still hold up for awhile, but such abuse is amplified on the graphite rod simply because of the smaller diameter of the shaft.

A graphite rod will withstand its share of punishment, just as any fine piece of equipment. But that doesn't mean the angler should carelessly toss it about in a boat, step on it or let it bounce around in the back of a pickup truck or the trunk of a car without some protection.

The fisherman who has little respect for his equipment is best off buying cheaper rods until he grows up, and shouldn't try to put the blame on rod manufacturers.

For the angler willing to shell out the money, a good quality graphite rod can offer increased handling ease and sensitivity.

Modern notion of 'doing theology' under attack

World of religion

by David E. Anderson

Theology, most simply, is God-talk. As long as people have wondered and talked about God, there has been theology.

In the Christian scheme of things, theology is the attempt to articulate, in a somewhat sophisticated way, the distinctive Christian message of Scripture to make the message meaningful for a particular time and place.

But according to Dr. George A. Lindbeck of the Divinity School of Yale University, the very notion of "doing theology" is today under attack.

Lindbeck was one of the signers of the now famous "Hartford Appeal," the manifesto that attacked 13 "themes" or patterns of thought of modern life as "false and debilitating" but all too pervasive in the life of the Church.

IN AN ARTICLE on the Appeal in historical perspective, Lindbeck argued that the Appeal is unique in history "because it battles for the possibility of theology rather than itself proposing a theology."

His article, "A Battle for Theology," along with essays by seven other signers of the Appeal which expand on the theme and intents of the manifesto's makers, has been published in a new book, "Against the World For the World" (Seabury Press).

In earlier times, Lindbeck said, previous theological manifestoes all assumed the possibility of Christian theology and the manifestoes were statements of various sides or positions in a debate.

"The quarrels between right and left, majorities and minorities, orthodox and heretics were over the right theology, not over the possibility of theology," he said.

TODAY, HOWEVER, the themes articulated in the baldest fashion in the Hartford Appeal — such notions as "Modern thought . . . is superior to all past forms of understanding reality" or "the world sets the agenda for the Church" — are so widespread, so much a part of everyone's common assumptions that they "inhibit the theological attempt to discern what is true and right from an independently Christian perspective." In other words, they make theology impossible.

"Many of the signers at Hartford admit they personally find these themes seductive," he said, adding that the themes "so completely discourage theology that they even prevent explicit heresay."

Another way of putting it is to say that Christian thinkers who subscribe to the themes attacked in the Hartford Appeal are held in "cultural captivity," where the fads and fancies of that which is contemporary shape their thinking more than the distinctive, timeless truths of the Christian faith.

LINDBECK BELIEVES this is a period of theological shift, a period of transition when older models for ways of thinking about the Christian faith do not seem adequate.

In the midst of such shifts, he argues, many are tempted to deny either the necessity or the possibility of theology. "The Appeal is addressed precisely to this danger," he noted.

"It does not try to propose either a new or old theology . . . It rather tries to rally together those who believe that theological affirmation is vital to Christianity.

"It asks Christians to attend seriously to past theological affirmations, and to recognize that these are better than nothing during our period of waiting and struggle for something new," he said.

Information classes for diabetics offered

Information classes for diabetics will be offered from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. May 24, 25 and 26 at Holy Family Hospital, 100 N. River Rd., Des Plaines.

Out-patient diabetics at least 18 years old, or a member of their family are invited to register by calling 297-1800, ext. 1150.

The course is limited to 10 persons but will be repeated monthly.

Veterans discharge advice available

Veterans with "less than honorable" discharges can get free legal advice on how to appeal for an upgrade of their discharges at counseling sessions scheduled Saturday by the American Veterans Committee.

Sessions will be held from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the LaSalle Hotel, 10 N. LaSalle St., Chicago.

The counseling is necessary because more than 750,000 Vietnam veterans have returned to civilian life with less than honorable discharges and have been severely handicapped as a result, a veterans' committee spokesman said.

Area persons join Brazil program

Four area residents, including Dist. 214 Supt. Dr. Edward Gilbert and his wife Armeldo, traveled to Sao Paulo, Brazil, May 9 to participate in "Partners' Week," beginning today.

The culture program is sponsored by Partners of the Americas, a human cooperative organization between North American and South American states and cities.

Stephen Jurco, an Arlington Heights attorney, and his wife, Idilia, president of the Sao Paulo-Illinois Partners Association, also are on the trip. They are former Arlington Heights residents, now living in Chicago.

Seventy state residents are attending the program.

The Partners week, a Bicentennial commemorative event, will include a walk-through panorama, exhibits about history, technology, architecture, nursing and education.

A production of the play "1776" and scenes from other American plays will be offered.

In addition to the exhibits, Joseph Pisciotte, director of the Illinois Dept. of Business and Economic Development, officially will open a Latin American office.

The state entourage returns to Illinois May 25.

The way we see it

Support will get policy to work

The Des Plaines Dist. 62 board is undertaking many needed changes to give the public a voice in district operations, and we hope the community responds with a renewed interest in their schools.

The Dist. 62 board has been criticized in the past by parents and teachers and on these pages for ignoring the community when making important decisions and for the air of secrecy that has shrouded sensitive issues.

About 500 people turned out at a board meeting this spring to talk about proposed budget cuts, and the board refused to allow anyone to speak until after the vote had been taken.

Some of the parents reacted to the snub by opposing uncontested candidates in the school board elections in April with a write-in slate and forming a citizens' group to monitor all board meetings.

The board also has reacted and in a very positive manner. Board members agreed to make agendas of meetings available to the public in advance of meetings and to allow two weeks between discussion of major issues and voting on those issues.

Monday night the board also will consider changing its agenda to allow public participation at the beginning and end of meetings, or during the meeting if a person requests a place on the agenda.

The board also will consider holding one board meeting a month at a neighborhood school to make it easier for residents to attend.

The board has taken the first step toward a more open atmosphere. Now it is the public's turn.

The citizens' group has attended board meetings along with representatives of the teachers' untion.

Now that the avenue of communication has opened up, we hope that more people in Des Plaines will take an interest in the board and their schools.

Idea to halt the sale of small guns is good

The proposal by Arlington Heights Police Chief L. W. Calderwood to ban the sale of small handguns in Arlington Heights is a good one, and we urge authorities of other communities to consider adopting similar laws.

The tiny handguns known as "Saturday night specials" have for years been the subject of the continuing Congressional controversy which ultimately ends in debate over Second Amendment rights of the citizenry to bear arms. As the debate becomes rhetorical, each year thousands of persons are murdered, almost all of them by persons using handguns. These small weapons can only be classified as "offensive weapons." They are weapons used in murder and other crime.

"There is no reason for this gun (the Saturday night special)," Calderwood said. "The only thing it is good for is concealing it," he said.

We agree with Calderwood and believe other law enforcement officials should follow this example in banning the sale of such weapons within their villages.

When lacking funds, make a splash

by DICK WEST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford finally has signed the bill promising release of $2.14 million in federal election funds. And not a moment too soon.

Several candidates were so financially strapped they were getting desperate. Were not the federal matching money soon to become available again, they might have done something rash.

When funds aren't available for newspaper advertising, television time, bumperstickers or whatever, candidates must resort to other means of keeping in the public eye.

The quest for free publicity generally takes the form of so-called "media events." Thus far, these happenings have been rather restrained, involving such stunts as riding elephants, playing basketball, touring coal mines and campaigning atop the 110-story World Trade Center.

Release of the federal campaign funds should keep this sort of thing at a minimum for awhile yet. But much of the money must be used to pay outstanding bills.

Thus it may not be long before some of the candidates are flat again. And no one knows where they will draw the line.

To see what might transpire, let's look in on a strategy meeting of a composite candidate, call him Sen. Brandex, and his advisers:

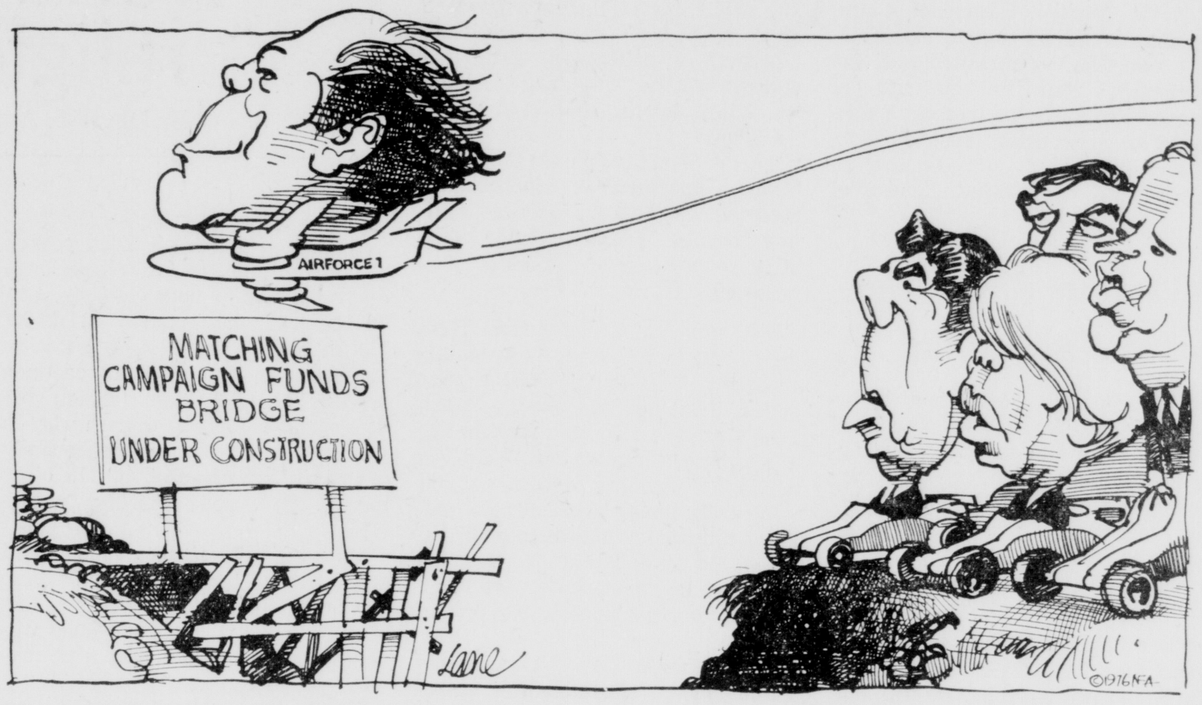
"Men, our treasury is so empty it has developed an echo. And we still have 15 primaries left. How am I going to keep my name and face before the voters?"

One of the media consultants pulls a clipping out of his briefcase.

"The next primary is in Maryland. It says here there's a congressional candidate in Maryland who launched his campaign with a parachute jump. That's never been done on the presidential level."

Brandex shakes his head. "If we had enough money to rent an airplane, we wouldn't need free publicity."

"How about going over Niagara Falls in a barrel?" suggests a veteran public relations adviser.



Executive privilege

"That used to be sure-fire. And the symbolism is perfect. Cartoonists traditionally picture a man wearing a barrel as a symbol of destitution."

This time the campaign travel coordinator objects. "Those falls are in New York and that primary is already over. Media events should be staged in the state where the candidate is campaigning."

"What comes after Maryland and Michigan?" the candidate asks.

The travel coordinator consults his schedule.

"Idaho!" he cries. "This could be the big splash we've been looking for. We'll arrange to have you jump across the Snake River canyon in a rocket-propelled bandwagon."

"Good thinking," says the candidate. "Except for one little thing. When Evel Knievel tried that on a motorcycle, he didn't make it."

"So much the better," says the campaign manager. "That way the splash you make will be the real thing."

More pro and con abortion

(Editor's note: The Herald has published numerous letters on the decision by Northwest Community Hospital to permit abortions under certain circumstances. Several of the following letters have been shortened either for brevity or to eliminate inflamatory or potentially libelous statements.)

We have been sick at heart since learning of the board of directors' decision. Our second child was born at Northwest; we would have chosen another hospital had we known that children's lives were also deliberately destroyed there.

We have been proud that our hospital has had the courage to live out its verbal commitment to support all life of the community it purports to serve. We urge the hospital to reconsider and reverse its recent decision and rededicate itself to the goals it professes.

Reading the latest letters protesting the new enlightened hospital policy saddens me.

Do you get letters promoting Christian sex education in schools, free birth control measures and V.D. clinics and the need for day care centers and help for abusive parents and their children? I wish that people that feel these things are important also would express their feelings.

Do people honestly and truly believe that abortions will not take place if they aren't done in hospitals and clinics? Don't people understand that when abortions were illegal in America, abortions were carried out anyway? Making abortions legal doesn't change the moral aspects of it — it merely makes it safer. Being pregnant and delivering a baby is not without risks either.

Thank you, Northwest Community Hospital, for your new humane policy.

Sunday night, May 9, after seeing a movie called Summer of '42 we saw Ellen McCormick's pro-life campaign film of a 3-week old child. Ironic I thought that these two would run back to back.

I have been watching your letter to the editor column to see what kind of reaction you were having to the recent vote. Happily I saw most of the letters were against the hospital's recent policy on abortion.

I certainly would hope more people would stand up and be counted in opposition to this going on at the local hospital where most of us have given birth to our children. Ironic how even the most learned want to ignore what doesn't go along with modern day thinking.

May the Lord, who had such a tender spot in his heart for little children that He said "Suffer the little children to come to me," forgive us all for our pride, ignorance or whatever else makes us do these things which must hurt Him very much.

As we are becoming more intelligent are we becoming less intelligent of real life and love?

I refuse to believe the majority of this community wants abortions performed at our hospital. Let's have another vote and this time let's have all the members present.

I am writing to applaud Dr. Kuhn for his integrity and for leadership he has shown in his stand against abortion. I am in complete agreement with him. I believe that from the moment of conception a baby is a reality of this life. It needs only a proper nourishing in the womb to grow.

I urge everyone to take an outing to the Museum of Science and Industry to view the Miracle of Life exhibit; and I urge the board of directors to reverse their decision.

Recently The Herald reported that according to hospital Pres. Malcomb MacCoun, a new policy was adopted because of a community feeling that abortions should be available at the hospital when agreed upon by a woman and her doctor. What community feeling? I have not met anyone in my neighborhood who advocates abortion. My parish church, comprised of more than 10,000 members, does not advocate abortion. Again quoting from The Herald article Robert Bukowski, chairman of the hospital's board of directors, stated that the board does not bow to pressure . . . they "vote their judgment and conscience." What conscience? The words conscience and abortion are at the opposite end of the spectrum. Abortion is taking the life of an innocent unborn child.

The persons who voted in favor of abortions, whether for monetary reasons or whatever, should open up their own private abortion clinic and not smudge the whole community of Arlington Heights by implying this is what the community wants.

I am the receptionist for Family Physicians of Mount Prospect. My position, as receptionist, gives me the opportunity and privilege to assist, in some small way, in the preservation of human life, not the destruction of it.

Due to my staunch belief in adoption not abortion, in the future whatever influence I may wield in referral of patients and/or non-patients to Northwest Community Hospital will definitely be influenced by their decision in this crucial matter.

Isn't it amazing — in Mount Prospect (and I'm sure other communities) it takes a two-third's vote of the board of trustees to accept a low bid on furniture for the library while at Northwest Community Hospital a simple majority of one can decide life or death.

The problems of disposing of men's dirty sox

by DOROTHY MEYER

Despite the best efforts of the women's liberation movement, there are some instances when it simply does not do to use the word "person" instead of "man" or "woman."

When men get together and say, "Women! I'll never understand them," or women say, "Isn't that just like a man," that's precisely what they mean.

Although I do not understand why men can't understand the female of the species, I will defend with my life their right to be such klutzes. Likewise I defend my right to say, "Isn't that just like a man," when, for instance, the subject is their dirty sox.

Men may dispose of their soiled sox differently from man to man, but collectively the male never deals with them properly, "properly" meaning "to put into the clothes hamper."

Dorothy Meyer's column

There have been many men in my life and I know whereof I speak.

When I was very young, there was my father and bachelor uncle plus two brothers. When my father and Unk went to that great clean sox supply in the sky, my brothers were supplemented by a brother-in-law and an old friend whose wife kicked him out. Eventually I had a husband and two sons.

My father left his sox inside his shoes and my uncle hid his in the closet. One of my brothers — the neat one and nobody knows how he got that way — hung his sox on the doorknob to air them out before he put them in the clothes hamper. But he never remembered to put them in the clothes hamper even after the doorknob fell off.

Brother Number Two kept wearing the same sox until Brother Neat threw him out of their bedroom and by then his sox could walk to the hamper by themselves provided they didn't stumble over the doorknob.

One of my friends has a husband who peels his sox off into a little ball and then caroms them off the closet door AT but never INTO the clothes hamper. Another one takes half an hour to undress, first emptying his pockets and neatly arranging the contents on the bureau, then hanging up his suit and tie, next putting his soiled clothing in the hamper. Last of all, he kicks his dirty sox under the bed.

My sons took after their father who neatly changed and properly disposed of all his clothes in the bedroom. Until he got to his sox which he changed in the living room while watching television. The dirty ones he threw on top of yesterday's newspapers. When I said, "Why do you put your dirty sox on the pile of yesterday's newspapers, I was told, "Because it's there." One day I picked up the newspapers and my husband went to work with his dirty sox still in his hand.

I can only conclude that if women ever become totally liberated, men's used sox will become the nation's number one pollution problem.

Early specs simple reading aids

by JEAN BARNES

John Hancock signed the Declaration of Independence so that King George III could read it without the aid of his glasses.

There weren't many who could afford the luxury of spectacles in those days, according to Dr. L. D. Bronson, California optometrist and collector. They were an expensive appliance often costing as much as $200. They did nothing to correct improper vision but were simple reading aids, he pointed out.

In his book, "Early American Specs," published by The Occidental Publishing Co., Glendale, Calif., Dr. Bronson explains that the first colonist known to have worn eyeglasses was Peter Brown (1620). Of London manufacture, these glasses were made of crude steel with five and one-half inch temples which ended in a large loop.

SINCE THE nose piece was simply a connecting device between the lens mountings, it did little to hold the specs in place. That's what the loops were for.

A cord or ribbon was threaded through the loops and tied behind the head and the colonist's wig hid the knot from sight.

These early spectacles invariably had round or oval lenses. Most had temples which folded and were fitted with some means of fastening them securely to the head.

By the latter half of the 18th century designers began improving the style and the temples had been changed from being hinged to a sliding type so that one half telescoped by means of a slotted temple. Loops also became smaller and less conspicuous. The lens mounting changed from round or oval to an octagonal shape.

THE NEXT CHANGE in design came about 1820 when designers began experimenting with improving the fit for eyeglass wearers. The connecting arch (called the bridge) across the nose was shortened to fit the contour of the nose and fitted with straight extensions to the lens frame.

By the time of the Civil War such manufacturing firms as American Optical and Bausch and Lomb had been established and spectacles were made in a variety of shapes — oval, rectangular, octagonal and hexagonal. Designers considered more than function. They also were concerned with comfort, style and proper fit. It was about this time that the wire riding bow which curved behind the ears was introduced.

RIMLESS or frameless glasses were introduced about 1900. The application of nose pads to the bridge started about 1925 and the use of white gold filled frames came just before World War II.

New collectors should be wary, Dr. Bronson cautions. These 19th and early 20th century styles have been copied to meet a growing demand created by nostalgia buffs. Early specs simple reading aids

by JEAN BARNES

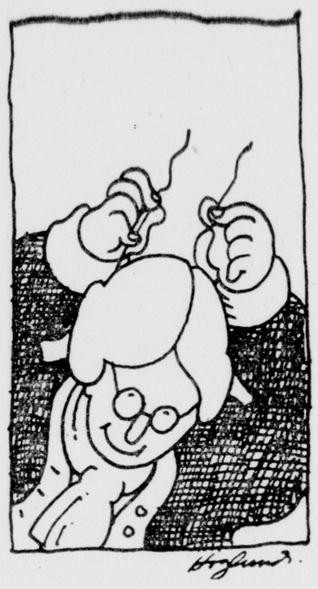
John Hancock signed the Declaration of Independence so that King George III could read it without the aid of his glasses.

There weren't many who could afford the luxury of spectacles in those days, according to Dr. L. D. Bronson, California optometrist and collector. They were an expensive appliance often costing as much as $200. They did nothing to correct improper vision but were simple reading aids, he pointed out.

In his book, "Early American Specs," published by The Occidental Publishing Co., Glendale, Calif., Dr. Bronson explains that the first colonist known to have worn eyeglasses was Peter Brown (1620). Of London manufacture, these glasses were made of crude steel with five and one-half inch temples which ended in a large loop.

SINCE THE nose piece was simply a connecting device between the lens mountings, it did little to hold the specs in place. That's what the loops were for.

A cord or ribbon was threaded through the loops and tied behind the head and the colonist's wig hid the knot from sight.



These early spectacles invariably had round or oval lenses. Most had temples which folded and were fitted with some means of fastening them securely to the head.

By the latter half of the 18th century designers began improving the style and the temples had been changed from being hinged to a sliding type so that one half telescoped by means of a slotted temple. Loops also became smaller and less conspicuous. The lens mounting changed from round or oval to an octagonal shape.

THE NEXT CHANGE in design came about 1820 when designers began experimenting with improving the fit for eyeglass wearers. The connecting arch (called the bridge) across the nose was shortened to fit the contour of the nose and fitted with straight extensions to the lens frame.

By the time of the Civil War such manufacturing firms as American Optical and Bausch and Lomb had been established and spectacles were made in a variety of shapes — oval, rectangular, octagonal and hexagonal. Designers considered more than function. They also were concerned with comfort, style and proper fit. It was about this time that the wire riding bow which curved behind the ears was introduced.

RIMLESS or frameless glasses were introduced about 1900. The application of nose pads to the bridge started about 1925 and the use of white gold filled frames came just before World War II.

New collectors should be wary, Dr. Bronson cautions. These 19th and early 20th century styles have been copied to meet a growing demand created by nostalgia buffs. The chances are good that if you find an antique pair of spectacles, the lenses will be of a later date than the frames. But the choicest find is that of frames with original lens.

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Risk still present for a heart attack

I am not proud to relate my story. I am 54 and was 50 pounds overweight until a year ago. I would consume six to eight ounces of martinis every day at gatherings and parties and I could down 15 to 20 cocktails and still feel I needed more.

Several months ago I had infrequent colds and my eyes filled with blood. When I saw my doctor, my blood pressure was 245 over 110 and he said I was a "living time bomb." I have cut the booze to almost nil, cut the caffeine in half and altered my life in many ways toward moderation. Of course, I still work 80 to 90 hours a week in my business which is loaded with stress and tension, but I seem to thrive on work.

In the last two years at least seven of my associates have died with heart attacks and many of these men were younger than I. Most were not drinkers or smokers and some were not even overweight. Perhaps the thing in my favor is that for 15 years I have been doing the Royal Canadian Air Force exercises religiously every day including the running. The whole thing only takes 11 minutes a day, and I do it faithfully.

I eat at least two pounds of raw vegetables and fruits every day plus mountains of salads. My pressure is still 165 over 90, but I did manage to lose 10 pounds. Do you believe the exercising and the vegetables have sustained me from a heart attack thus far?

When a man is playing Russian Roulette with one bullet in the barrel, it is very hard to guess when that bullet is going to be in line for firing. The risks imposed by unhealthy living habits are similar to playing Russian Roulette. Obviously the more chambers you have loaded with bullets or unhealthy habits the greater will be the likelihood that one is going to kill you.

You have done very well by decreasing your alcohol intake and getting your weight down, at least partially. It sounds as if you have a long way to go yet.

There are several factors which may have helped you. One might be your ancestry. If your parents have lived a long time in good health, you might give them credit for this. Another is the type of food you eat. If your blood test shows that you have a low cholesterol level, then you have done pretty well in spite of being overweight.

Your exercise may have helped, but I would not like to delude anybody into thinking that a moderate exercise program, which the Royal Canadian Air Force Exercise plan that you are speaking of is, can protect a person from having heart or vascular disease. I am strongly in favor of exercise, but we must keep in mind the total preventive program for heart and vascular disease: avoiding obesity, eating and proper diet, avoiding cigarets and possibly eliminating certain forms of stress.

Risk factors for heart disease are for groups. Some people who follow all of the recommendations still have trouble. The risk, though, is reduced by at least 50 per cent by preventive programs. Some individuals who do everything wrong still have the good fortune to escape having a heart attack or disabling stroke.

For information on what to do if you have a heart attack send 50 cents for The Health Letter, number 2-11, Heart Attack: When It Strikes, Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Snakes will flee when hiding places cleared

Dear Dorothy: Snakes! I despise them. I'm in near-panic and need help. We moved from close-in to what we always wanted — a country place with some land. Just getting settled, I discovered a snakeskin and if I hadn't been restrained, I'd have moved to a hotel instantly. Is there a sure way to get rid of them for good? — Helen Lindenmeyer.

Yes. Snakes disappear when there's an absence of rodents and cover (weeds, brush, flat rocks, etc.). You have to make your house totally rodent-proof and clear the grounds of obvious places for snakes to hide. Not all people share your terror. Attorney Rodney Layton, for one, loves telling of asking his children for a birthday present of black snakes! He was delighted to receive a bag containing six, boasting he had a sure way to clear out the rodents. He let them loose in the barn and says sadly they've not been sighted since and the rodents continue to frisk about. So this year he is turning to the equally non-poisonous milk snake, which he calls the "sovereign menace of mice and rats." Rod concedes that "to the untutored eye, the poor thing resembles the copperhead of deservedly evil reputation." Like you, I prefer to remain totally untutored.

Dear Dorothy: Here's an "International Coffee" recipe I devised after enjoying some New Orleans "chicory" coffee. Add one teaspoon of chicory to each cup to be brewed. Then, as it is served, hot milk is added, 50-50, with the rather strong, rich coffee. Magnifique!—Dorothy Lundahl

Dear Dorothy: When I travel, I never worry about my costume or other jewelry getting tarnished or stained as it is a simple thing to clean it up with toothpaste — which is always at hand. — Louise Horvath.

Dear Dorothy: I often come across recipes that call for just one or two tablespoons of tomato puree. The smallest can that I can find holds six ounces — which means wasting the rest unless I can find some way to use up the rest within a few days. In Europe it is sold in tubes so you can squeeze out what you need and the rest stays fresh until you need it. Has anybody found a way to cope with this problem?—Adele Vincent.

That used to annoy this packrat until I solved the problem — and such a simple solution. I put the remainder of the puree or sauce in a small jar with a screw-on top and put it into the freezer. When a small amount is needed, it is scraped off the top or if there is water included in the recipe, I pour a little boiling water over the top until enough of the tomato has come off. Then back into the freezer.

Provenzanos mark 50th

It was through one of her big brothers that Laura DeFalco of Des Plaines met August Provenzano, who in 1923 at the age of 22 had emigrated from Italy to make his home in America.

Laura was just a very young girl when her parents, the Sam DeFalcos, came from Italy, and she was only 16 when she and Sam were married March 27, 1926, by Fr. John Linden in St. Mary's Church in Des Plaines.

The newlyweds honeymooned in Chicago and shortly moved into their first house on Brown Street in Des Plaines, now the site of a condominium. Still residents of Des Plaines, the couple now reside on Prairie Avenue and are still active in St. Mary's Church.

AUGUST RETIRED in 1963 after more than 40 years with Benjamin Electric in Des Plaines, and Laura retired in 1974 from Standard Piano and Hammer Co., also in Des Plaines. Now, Laura spends much of her time keeping up with her 15 grandchildren and Sam does most of the gardening.

Their golden anniversary was marked with a dinner dance for more than 100 relatives and friends on March 27 at the Little Villa Lounge in Des Plaines. The party was given by their three sons, Charles and Michael of Des Plaines and Ronald of Huntley.

Mr. and Mrs. August Provenzano

THEIR DAUGHTER, Caroline Durst, came from Lake City, Minn., for the party which was highlighted by an invocation given by Fr. Ted Dobson of Oak Lawn, nephew of their son Charles and his wife Dorothy.

Also, there were congratulatory letters from President and Mrs. Gerald Ford, Gov. Dan Walker, Senators Stevenson and Percy and John Cardinal Cody along with rosaries blessed by Pope Paul VII.

U.S. drags feet on metric system scientist says adoption 'inevitable'

If American consumers could have metrics implanted in their systems, 90 per cent of them would reject it, said Jane Keeley, equipment editor of Good Housekeeping magazine, at a workshop on the metric system in Chicago this week.

And she's probably right. A government survey in the late '60s, the U.S. Metric Study Interim Report, showed:

- The majority of persons are satisfied with the present American Standard system;
- They know little about the metric system;
- They can be expected to react with apathy to any planned conversion;
- They think conversion will be inconvenient.

But converting is inevitable, said Arthur Badenhop, Purdue University food scientist told the workshop. "We are one in five countries in the world that haven't."

The goverment made a serious error, he said, when it abandoned its 10-year conversion plan, opting for a target date "sometime in the future."

Now industry and consumers are left "floundering" in a haze of confusion, Badenhop said. It took years for Congress to decide how to spell the word meter (metre or meter), he said.

Badenhop and his wife, Sue, a housing instructor at Purdue, addressed themselves to expected changes in housing and equipment.

THERE WILL BE dual measurements on appliances for many years, said Mrs. Badenhop. Already one brand of stove includes a metric converter on control panels, she said.

But the problem goes beyond consumer adaptation to metrics, since the housing industry is very inter-related, she said. For example, metric-sized pans have to fit into ovens and appliances have to fit alloted spaces in homes.

Next year or the year after, the building industry should come out with construction standards in metrics for items like counter heights and insulation depths, she said.

"It seems manufacturers are willing to convert, but no one has made the move because it's not economically feasible," said Mrs. Badenhop. "But when one goes (metric), they all will go."

THE CLOTHING area is more definitive than housing. Industry will simply convert its size "codes" into metrics for garment construction, said Rose Greeley Remmekamp, a textiles and clothing specialist with Amana Co. She said size 10 today will still be a size 10 under the metric system.

Items requiring critical measurements, like neck and sleeve measurements on men's shirts, will list dual increments at the first stages of conversion. Levi Straus is already doing this with blue jeans, she said.

Eventually, actual sizes will change slightly to accommodate rounded-off metric units, she said.

For the home seamstress, notions like thread, tape measures and rulers are available in dual or metric measures. By fall Vogue and Butterick pattern companies will have patterns with dual measures and instructions. And Euroepan sewing machines have been "metricated" for a long time, said Mrs. Remmekamp.

"WE'RE NOT GOING to be doing a lot of converting," she said.

Measuring cups and spoons for both liquid and dry kitchen measurements are now on the American market. Expense of purchasing a gram scale is not expected for home cooking, said Jane Keely of Good Housekeeping.

Recommendations coming out of the workshop to help consumers adapt to metrics were:

- Notice, don't ignore, metric changes on labels and in stores;
- Buy dual equipment when new utensils or appliances are needed, or go all the way and buy just metric;
- Think in terms of 10, just as with the U.S. money system, and have a conception of metric units. For example, a nickel weighs five grams and a quarter is 2.5 centimeters across.

"For years metrics has been something down the line," said Ms. Keely. "Until there was more impact for us (industry and educators) and consumers, it just wasn't real. But I think we're getting there now."

The doctor says

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Risk still present for a heart attack

I am not proud to relate my story. I am 54 and was 50 pounds overweight until a year ago. I would consume six to eight ounces of martinis every day at gatherings and parties and I could down 15 to 20 cocktails and still feel I needed more.

Several months ago I had infrequent colds and my eyes filled with blood. When I saw my doctor, my blood pressure was 245 over 110 and he said I was a "living time bomb." I have cut the booze to almost nil, cut the caffeine in half and altered my life in many ways toward moderation. Of course, I still work 80 to 90 hours a week in my business which is loaded with stress and tension, but I seem to thrive on work.

In the last two years at least seven of my associates have died with heart attacks and many of these men were younger than I. Most were not drinkers or smokers and some were not even overweight. Perhaps the thing in my favor is that for 15 years I have been doing the Royal Canadian Air Force exercises religiously every day including the running. The whole thing only takes 11 minutes a day, and I do it faithfully.

I eat at least two pounds of raw vegetables and fruits every day plus mountains of salads. My pressure is still 165 over 90, but I did manage to lose 10 pounds. Do you believe the exercising and the vegetables have sustained me from a heart attack thus far?

When a man is playing Russian Roulette with one bullet in the barrel, it is very hard to guess when that bullet is going to be in line for firing. The risks imposed by unhealthy living habits are similar to playing Russian Roulette. Obviously the more chambers you have loaded with bullets or unhealthy habits the greater will be the likelihood that one is going to kill you.

You have done very well by decreasing your alcohol intake and getting your weight down, at least partially. It sounds as if you have a long way to go yet.

There are several factors which may have helped you. One might be your ancestry. If your parents have lived a long time in good health, you might give them credit for this. Another is the type of food you eat. If your blood test shows that you have a low cholesterol level, then you have done pretty well in spite of being overweight.

Your exercise may have helped, but I would not like to delude anybody into thinking that a moderate exercise program, which the Royal Canadian Air Force Exercise plan that you are speaking of is, can protect a person from having heart or vascular disease. I am strongly in favor of exercise, but we must keep in mind the total preventive program for heart and vascular disease: avoiding obesity, eating and proper diet, avoiding cigarets and possibly eliminating certain forms of stress.

Risk factors for heart disease are for groups. Some people who follow all of the recommendations still have trouble. The risk, though, is reduced by at least 50 per cent by preventive programs. Some individuals who do everything wrong still have the good fortune to escape having a heart attack or disabling stroke.

For information on what to do if you have a heart attack send 50 cents for The Health Letter, number 2-11, Heart Attack: When It Strikes, Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Snakes will flee when hiding places cleared

Dear Dorothy: Snakes! I despise them. I'm in near-panic and need help. We moved from close-in to what we always wanted — a country place with some land. Just getting settled, I discovered a snakeskin and if I hadn't been restrained, I'd have moved to a hotel instantly. Is there a sure way to get rid of them for good? — Helen Lindenmeyer.

Yes. Snakes disappear when there's an absence of rodents and cover (weeds, brush, flat rocks, etc.). You have to make your house totally rodent-proof and clear the grounds of obvious places for snakes to hide. Not all people share your terror. Attorney Rodney Layton, for one, loves telling of asking his children for a birthday present of black snakes! He was delighted to receive a bag containing six, boasting he had a sure way to clear out the rodents. He let them loose in the barn and says sadly they've not been sighted since and the rodents continue to frisk about. So this year he is turning to the equally non-poisonous milk snake, which he calls the "sovereign menace of mice and rats." Rod concedes that "to the untutored eye, the poor thing resembles the copperhead of deservedly evil reputation." Like you, I prefer to remain totally untutored.

Dear Dorothy: Here's an "International Coffee" recipe I devised after enjoying some New Orleans "chicory" coffee. Add one teaspoon of chicory to each cup to be brewed. Then, as it is served, hot milk is added, 50-50, with the rather strong, rich coffee. Magnifique!—Dorothy Lundahl

Dear Dorothy: When I travel, I never worry about my costume or other jewelry getting tarnished or stained as it is a simple thing to clean it up with toothpaste — which is always at hand. — Louise Horvath.

Dear Dorothy: I often come across recipes that call for just one or two tablespoons of tomato puree. The smallest can that I can find holds six ounces — which means wasting the rest unless I can find some way to use up the rest within a few days. In Europe it is sold in tubes so you can squeeze out what you need and the rest stays fresh until you need it. Has anybody found a way to cope with this problem?—Adele Vincent.

That used to annoy this packrat until I solved the problem — and such a simple solution. I put the remainder of the puree or sauce in a small jar with a screw-on top and put it into the freezer. When a small amount is needed, it is scraped off the top or if there is water included in the recipe, I pour a little boiling water over the top until enough of the tomato has come off. Then back into the freezer.

Provenzanos mark 50th

It was through one of her big brothers that Laura DeFalco of Des Plaines met August Provenzano, who in 1923 at the age of 22 had emigrated from Italy to make his home in America.

Laura was just a very young girl when her parents, the Sam DeFalcos, came from Italy, and she was only 16 when she and Sam were married March 27, 1926, by Fr. John Linden in St. Mary's Church in Des Plaines.

The newlyweds honeymooned in Chicago and shortly moved into their first house on Brown Street in Des Plaines, now the site of a condominium. Still residents of Des Plaines, the couple now reside on Prairie Avenue and are still active in St. Mary's Church.

AUGUST RETIRED in 1963 after more than 40 years with Benjamin Electric in Des Plaines, and Laura retired in 1974 from Standard Piano and Hammer Co., also in Des Plaines. Now, Laura spends much of her time keeping up with her 15 grandchildren and Sam does most of the gardening.

Their golden anniversary was marked with a dinner dance for more than 100 relatives and friends on March 27 at the Little Villa Lounge in Des Plaines. The party was given by their three sons, Charles and Michael of Des Plaines and Ronald of Huntley.

Mr. and Mrs. August Provenzano

THEIR DAUGHTER, Caroline Durst, came from Lake City, Minn., for the party which was highlighted by an invocation given by Fr. Ted Dobson of Oak Lawn, nephew of their son Charles and his wife Dorothy.

Also, there were congratulatory letters from President and Mrs. Gerald Ford, Gov. Dan Walker, Senators Stevenson and Percy and John Cardinal Cody along with rosaries blessed by Pope Paul VII.

U.S. drags feet on metric system scientist says adoption 'inevitable'

If American consumers could have metrics implanted in their systems, 90 per cent of them would reject it, said Jane Keeley, equipment editor of Good Housekeeping magazine, at a workshop on the metric system in Chicago this week.

And she's probably right. A government survey in the late '60s, the U.S. Metric Study Interim Report, showed:

- The majority of persons are satisfied with the present American Standard system;
- They know little about the metric system;
- They can be expected to react with apathy to any planned conversion;
- They think conversion will be inconvenient.

But converting is inevitable, said Arthur Badenhop, Purdue University food scientist told the workshop. "We are one in five countries in the world that haven't."

The goverment made a serious error, he said, when it abandoned its 10-year conversion plan, opting for a target date "sometime in the future."

Now industry and consumers are left "floundering" in a haze of confusion, Badenhop said. It took years for Congress to decide how to spell the word meter (metre or meter), he said.

Badenhop and his wife, Sue, a housing instructor at Purdue, addressed themselves to expected changes in housing and equipment.

THERE WILL BE dual measurements on appliances for many years, said Mrs. Badenhop. Already one brand of stove includes a metric converter on control panels, she said.

But the problem goes beyond consumer adaptation to metrics, since the housing industry is very inter-related, she said. For example, metric-sized pans have to fit into ovens and appliances have to fit alloted spaces in homes.

Next year or the year after, the building industry should come out with construction standards in metrics for items like counter heights and insulation depths, she said.

"It seems manufacturers are willing to convert, but no one has made the move because it's not economically feasible," said Mrs. Badenhop. "But when one goes (metric), they all will go."

THE CLOTHING area is more definitive than housing. Industry will simply convert its size "codes" into metrics for garment construction, said Rose Greeley Remmekamp, a textiles and clothing specialist with Amana Co. She said size 10 today will still be a size 10 under the metric system.

Items requiring critical measurements, like neck and sleeve measurements on men's shirts, will list dual increments at the first stages of conversion. Levi Straus is already doing this with blue jeans, she said.

Eventually, actual sizes will change slightly to accommodate rounded-off metric units, she said.

For the home seamstress, notions like thread, tape measures and rulers are available in dual or metric measures. By fall Vogue and Butterick pattern companies will have patterns with dual measures and instructions. And Euroepan sewing machines have been "metricated" for a long time, said Mrs. Remmekamp.

"WE'RE NOT GOING to be doing a lot of converting," she said.

Long journey brings milk to table

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1976 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Rafika Woods, 11, of East Chicago, Ind., for her question:

WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN HOMOGENIZED, PASTEURIZED AND EVAPORATED MILK?

Milk has often been called nature's most nearly perfect food. And since it is the first food for newborn babies, it should be nothing less. It is the white liquid produced by the females of the warmblooded animals called mammals. Its production takes place in the mammary glands, and its purpose is to nourish their young.

Under the bottle cap or sealed in the carton of a quart of milk lies a host of good things just waiting to happen to the body of a growing child. Calcium and phosphorus can't wait to start building strong bones and teeth. Other substances are ready to go to work on growth and developing good, clear skin.

Milk, as it comes from the cow, is termed raw milk. To make sure that the quality and purity of the milk is as high as possible a number of tests are administered. These tests help determine the butterfat content, the amount of acid and the bacterial population present. After the milk has been tested and passed, it is sent to a clarifier. This machine takes out any foreign substance such as dust or hair that might have strayed into the milk.

The milk is now ready for the pasteurization process. During this stage the milk is heated to kill any disease-causing bacteria that may be present. Almost all milk in the United States that is sold for drinking is pasteurized. The process owes its name to the famed French scientist Louis Pasteur who discovered, in the late 1800s, that heating fluids kills bacteria.

Homogenization is the process that breaks up the fat, or cream, globules into tiny droplets which are then distributed evenly throughout the milk. To accomplish this, the milk is forced through tiny openings under great pressure. About 75 per cent of the milk sold in the United States is homogenized. In milk that is not homogenized, the cream rises to the top and forms a separate layer.

Evaporated milk has had about 60 per cent of the water removed. It is prepared by heating pasteurized and homogenized milk in special tanks to evaporate the water. After the proper amount of water has been removed, it is canned and sealed. Condensed milk is similar to evaporated milk, except that sugar has been added.

From the cow to the kitchen table is a long journey for a bottle of milk. And throughout the trip every effort is made to keep the milk pure and uncontaminated by bacateria. Dairies are kept spotlessly clean and super sanitary.

Andy sends a Student Globe to Craig Cassaday, 14, of Tulsa, Okla., for his question:

WHY IS IODINE ADDED TO SALT?

The old saying, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," aptly applies to the addition of iodine to table salt. For minute quantities of iodine are vital to our nutritional needs.

The absence of iodine causes disorders in the thyroid gland, which lies between the Adam's apple and the top of the breastbone. This gland secretes important substances in the body which help regulate growth in children and vital metabolic functions in adults. For centuries, many unfortunate folk suffered from a disease called goiter, which causes the thyroid gland to enlarge and function improperly.

In the early 1920s research proved that a lack of iodine caused this malady. In 1921 one of the earliest large-scale human experiments was conducted in Akron, Ohio. Six thousand schoolchildren were involved, and the results showed that those receiving iodine in drinking water did not develop goiter, while a large proportion of those not so treated did. Later, the more effective means of making iodine voluntarily available to everyone was developed by adding potassium iodine to table salt.

MAGIC LOOPS

Fool your friends with this easy trick! Cut three strips one inch wide down the length of a newspaper. Secretly glue the ends of each strip together like this:

Loop 1: Glue the ends in a regular loop.

Loop 2: Make one-half twist before gluing the ends.

Loop 3: Make one whole twist before gluing the ends.

Show the three loops. Say you can magically make the loops do different things. Cut the first loop around the middle. It will fall into two small loops. Cut the second loop around the middle. It will form one big loop. The third loop, when cut, will make two linked loops.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Ask Andy

Long journey brings milk to table

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1976 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Rafika Woods, 11, of East Chicago, Ind., for her question:

WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN HOMOGENIZED, PASTEURIZED AND EVAPORATED MILK?

Milk has often been called nature's most nearly perfect food. And since it is the first food for newborn babies, it should be nothing less. It is the white liquid produced by the females of the warmblooded animals called mammals. Its production takes place in the mammary glands, and its purpose is to nourish their young.

Under the bottle cap or sealed in the carton of a quart of milk lies a host of good things just waiting to happen to the body of a growing child. Calcium and phosphorus can't wait to start building strong bones and teeth. Other substances are ready to go to work on growth and developing good, clear skin.

Milk, as it comes from the cow, is termed raw milk. To make sure that the quality and purity of the milk is as high as possible a number of tests are administered. These tests help determine the butterfat content, the amount of acid and the bacterial population present. After the milk has been tested and passed, it is sent to a clarifier. This machine takes out any foreign substance such as dust or hair that might have strayed into the milk.

The milk is now ready for the pasteurization process. During this stage the milk is heated to kill any disease-causing bacteria that may be present. Almost all milk in the United States that is sold for drinking is pasteurized. The process owes its name to the famed French scientist Louis Pasteur who discovered, in the late 1800s, that heating fluids kills bacteria.

Homogenization is the process that breaks up the fat, or cream, globules into tiny droplets which are then distributed evenly throughout the milk. To accomplish this, the milk is forced through tiny openings under great pressure. About 75 per cent of the milk sold in the United States is homogenized. In milk that is not homogenized, the cream rises to the top and forms a separate layer.

Evaporated milk has had about 60 per cent of the water removed. It is prepared by heating pasteurized and homogenized milk in special tanks to evaporate the water. After the proper amount of water has been removed, it is canned and sealed. Condensed milk is similar to evaporated milk, except that sugar has been added.

From the cow to the kitchen table is a long journey for a bottle of milk. And throughout the trip every effort is made to keep the milk pure and uncontaminated by bacateria. Dairies are kept spotlessly clean and super sanitary.

Andy sends a Student Globe to Craig Cassaday, 14, of Tulsa, Okla., for his question:

WHY IS IODINE ADDED TO SALT?

The old saying, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," aptly applies to the addition of iodine to table salt. For minute quantities of iodine are vital to our nutritional needs.

The absence of iodine causes disorders in the thyroid gland, which lies between the Adam's apple and the top of the breastbone. This gland secretes important substances in the body which help regulate growth in children and vital metabolic functions in adults. For centuries, many unfortunate folk suffered from a disease called goiter, which causes the thyroid gland to enlarge and function improperly.

In the early 1920s research proved that a lack of iodine caused this malady. In 1921 one of the earliest large-scale human experiments was conducted in Akron, Ohio. Six thousand schoolchildren were involved, and the results showed that those receiving iodine in drinking water did not develop goiter, while a large proportion of those not so treated did. Later, the more effective means of making iodine voluntarily available to everyone was developed by adding potassium iodine to table salt.

MAGIC LOOPS

Fool your friends with this easy trick! Cut three strips one inch wide down the length of a newspaper. Secretly glue the ends of each strip together like this:

Loop 1: Glue the ends in a regular loop.

Loop 2: Make one-half twist before gluing the ends.

Loop 3: Make one whole twist before gluing the ends.

Show the three loops. Say you can magically make the loops do different things. Cut the first loop around the middle. It will fall into two small loops. Cut the second loop around the middle. It will form one big loop. The third loop, when cut, will make two linked loops.

Area residents escape property tax refund hoax

Northwest suburban residents apparently have not fallen victim to a hoax involving alleged property tax refunds that has spread in parts of Chicago and western and southern suburbs.

Officials of the Cook County Treasurer's office Friday said the hoax, in the form of a letter that is being passed around some neighborhoods, had not spread into the Northwest suburban area.

The letter tells property owners that an unspecified Illinois Supreme Court decision has declared Cook County tax assessments unconstitutional and says persons are entitled to tax refunds.

Thomas Leach, a spokesman for the county treasurer's office, said the office has received 50 to 100 calls a day for the last week from the south and west sides of Chicago and some suburbs about the letter. Other calls, he said, have gone to savings and loan associations and other mortgage holders.

Leach said, "There are no refunds. We wish there were, but there aren't. We've got 1.3 million property owners in the county, so there's a wide audience for this sort of thing."

Metropolitan briefs

Registration dates scheduled in the Northwest suburbs are: May 18, Schaumburg High School and St. Viator High School; May 19, Forest View High School; May 24, Rolling Meadows High School; May 25, Maine East High School; and May 26, Hersey High School.

Top-rate funds for banks

Three Northwest suburban banks this week were among the first 10 to receive funds under a new countywide bank investment project run by the Circuit Court Clerk.

Des Plaines National Bank, Buffalo Grove National Bank and the First Bank and Trust of Palatine each received $100,000 deposits in certificates of deposit that will bear the top available interest rate, Court Clerk Morgan Finley said.

Under the clerk's new investment plan, all 175 of the county's banks are eligible for county deposits. The court clerk's office now has $19,500,000 invested in county banks.

Israeli award luncheon

Cook County Assessor Thomas Tully will receive the 12 Tribes of Israel award at a luncheon of the Israel bond campaign Friday, May 28 in Chicago.

The award is the highest given to a non-Israeli by the government of Israel. Tully is being honored for his part in the sale of Israel Bonds.

The award will be presented at the bond campaign noon luncheon at the Conrad Hilton Hotel, Chicago.

Student voter registration

Cook County voter registration will be available to students in six area high schools between now and May 26, the county clerk's office has announced.

The special registration of students is being conducted at high schools and community colleges throughout the county in cooperation with the county League of Women Voters. Registration in late April and early May at 15 schools resulted in 2,293 new voters signing up, the clerk's office said.

Brennan fundraiser at restaurant Sunday

Joan Brennan, Democratic candidate for state representative from the 3rd District, will have a fund-raising reception Sunday at the Brass Rail Restaurant, 2121 Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights.

The reception will be from 4 to 7 p.m. Tickets are $15 per person.

Mrs. Brennan, of Elk Grove Village, has criticized State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, for her votes against overriding Gov. Daniel Walker's education veto last fall. She is a special education consultant and a member of the Elk Grove Park District board of commissioners.

Area residents escape property tax refund hoax

Northwest suburban residents apparently have not fallen victim to a hoax involving alleged property tax refunds that has spread in parts of Chicago and western and southern suburbs.

Officials of the Cook County Treasurer's office Friday said the hoax, in the form of a letter that is being passed around some neighborhoods, had not spread into the Northwest suburban area.

The letter tells property owners that an unspecified Illinois Supreme Court decision has declared Cook County tax assessments unconstitutional and says persons are entitled to tax refunds.

Thomas Leach, a spokesman for the county treasurer's office, said the office has received 50 to 100 calls a day for the last week from the south and west sides of Chicago and some suburbs about the letter. Other calls, he said, have gone to savings and loan associations and other mortgage holders.

Leach said, "There are no refunds. We wish there were, but there aren't. We've got 1.3 million property owners in the county, so there's a wide audience for this sort of thing."

Metropolitan briefs

Registration dates scheduled in the Northwest suburbs are: May 18, Schaumburg High School and St. Viator High School; May 19, Forest View High School; May 24, Rolling Meadows High School; May 25, Maine East High School; and May 26, Hersey High School.

Top-rate funds for banks

Three Northwest suburban banks this week were among the first 10 to receive funds under a new countywide bank investment project run by the Circuit Court Clerk.

Des Plaines National Bank, Buffalo Grove National Bank and the First Bank and Trust of Palatine each received $100,000 deposits in certificates of deposit that will bear the top available interest rate, Court Clerk Morgan Finley said.

Under the clerk's new investment plan, all 175 of the county's banks are eligible for county deposits. The court clerk's office now has $19,500,000 invested in county banks.

The award will be presented at the bond campaign noon luncheon at the Conrad Hilton Hotel, Chicago.

Stocks plunge; Dow down by 8.5

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices plunged along a broad front Friday in moderate trading on the New York Stock Exchange in reaction to a surge in the nation's money supply that could lead to higher interest rates.

The Dow Jones industrial average, a 4.57-point loser Thursday, lost 8.50 points to 992.60. For the week, the blue-chip average lost 3.62 points in failing for the seventh time this year to sustain a move through the 1,000 level.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index lost 0.82 to 101.34, the NYSE Common Stock index shed 0.42 to 54.01 and the average price of an NYSE common share decreased by 26 cents.

Declines routed advances, 980 to 425, among the 1,835 issues crossing the tape.

Volume totaled 16,800,000 shares, compared with 16,730,000 traded Thursday.

THE FEDERAL Reserve Board triggered the selling with its report late Thursday that the nation's money supply surged at a 19 per cent clip in the latest four-week reporting period, sharply above the board's target range of 4½ to 7 per cent.

Trendsetting Citibank of New York added to the selling urge by raising its prime rate to the prevailing 6¾ per cent level from 6½ per cent.

Further, the Fed failed to take steps during the day to stop the rise of federal funds, the rates banks charge one another for overnight loans of uncommitted reserves.

This indicated the Fed might have tightened credit for the third time in a month to stem the money supply surge and prevent inflation from ruining the economic recovery, analysts said.

Prices were lower in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an Amex share decreased by six cents. Volume totaled 2,060,000 shares, compared with 2,180,000 traded Thursday.

Regulations called cause for gas cost increase

Government price regulations and oil company policies are the reasons for increasing gasoline prices in the Chicago area, said a Mount Prospect service station operator Thursday.

Marion Barwig, who manages Marion's Texaco station at Dempster and Algonquin roads, said his pump price for regular gas jumped a penny a gallon last week. Barwig said his retail price of 62.9 cents a gallon for regular gas reflects increased price charged by Texaco, taxes and other costs. The one-cent-a-gallon price hike was announced as "recovery of increased costs" in line with Federal Energy Administration regulations.

MOTORISTS CAN find gasoline priced lower than his cost, Barwig said. "If people want gasoline at a cheap price, they may get their windows washed and they may get a quart of oil, but that's all," he said, nothing that many dealers do not offer repair service.

Gasoline prices increased during the past two weeks in the Chicago and Downstate Illinois areas, the Chicago Motor Club said Thursday. The club pegs the average Cook County price for regular gas at 59.4 cents a gallong, compared to 58.4 cents two weeks earlier. Premium prices rose .7 cent, to 64.8 cents a gallon.

"The spread between the highest and lowest prices for both regular and premium remains at more than 10 cents a gallon," the report said. "In Chicago and Cook County, a price difference of 13 cents a gallon of regular was found."

Exercise in role-playing to highlight park unit meet

Wary of a problem that plagues many seminars, the Suburban Parks and Recreation Assn. will try something new in its annual Playground and Day Camp Institute June 19. The new program is aimed at making the day's meetings appear more relevant to actual playground or day camp leadership experience through role-playing.

The institute, which will be at Hersey High School, 1900 E. Thomas St., Arlington Heights, will attempt to train employes of suburban recreational organizations who work with youths in their areas.

"Sometimes, they get so much information from the meetings that they don't know what to do with it all," said Barbara Iacovetti, association member and Arlington Heights Park District supervisor. "So we've added another activity to our regular program."

IN THE NEW PROGRAM, park district and recreational agency officials will play the role of camp leaders and the institute participants will play the role of children.

"Some of the people who work in the park districts are 15, 16, 17 years old," said Iacovetti. "We want to give them an idea what it's like working."

More than 500 persons are expected to attend this year's institute. Many persons work for agencies that are members of the association, which is comprised of about 90 suburban park districts and recreational agencies.

Registration forms and further information are available by writing the Arlington Heights Park District, 1005 E. Suffield Dr. The registration charge is $3 for association members and $5 for others.

Checks should be made payable to the Suburban Parks and Recreation Assn. and sent with the registration form by June 1 to the Homewood-Flossmor Park District, 18350 Harwood Ave., Homewood, Ill. 60430.

Besides the role-playing experience, other activities will be offered in the following areas: creative drama and music, special events, safety and accident prevention, preschool programming, Bicentennial ideas and playground activities.

Stocks plunge; Dow down by 8.5

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices plunged along a broad front Friday in moderate trading on the New York Stock Exchange in reaction to a surge in the nation's money supply that could lead to higher interest rates.

The Dow Jones industrial average, a 4.57-point loser Thursday, lost 8.50 points to 992.60. For the week, the blue-chip average lost 3.62 points in failing for the seventh time this year to sustain a move through the 1,000 level.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index lost 0.82 to 101.34, the NYSE Common Stock index shed 0.42 to 54.01 and the average price of an NYSE common share decreased by 26 cents.

Declines routed advances, 980 to 425, among the 1,835 issues crossing the tape.

Volume totaled 16,800,000 shares, compared with 16,730,000 traded Thursday.

THE FEDERAL Reserve Board triggered the selling with its report late Thursday that the nation's money supply surged at a 19 per cent clip in the latest four-week reporting period, sharply above the board's target range of 4½ to 7 per cent.

Trendsetting Citibank of New York added to the selling urge by raising its prime rate to the prevailing 6¾ per cent level from 6½ per cent.

Further, the Fed failed to take steps during the day to stop the rise of federal funds, the rates banks charge one another for overnight loans of uncommitted reserves.

This indicated the Fed might have tightened credit for the third time in a month to stem the money supply surge and prevent inflation from ruining the economic recovery, analysts said.

Prices were lower in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an Amex share decreased by six cents. Volume totaled 2,060,000 shares, compared with 2,180,000 traded Thursday.

Regulations called cause for gas cost increase

Government price regulations and oil company policies are the reasons for increasing gasoline prices in the Chicago area, said a Mount Prospect service station operator Thursday.

Marion Barwig, who manages Marion's Texaco station at Dempster and Algonquin roads, said his pump price for regular gas jumped a penny a gallon last week. Barwig said his retail price of 62.9 cents a gallon for regular gas reflects increased price charged by Texaco, taxes and other costs. The one-cent-a-gallon price hike was announced as "recovery of increased costs" in line with Federal Energy Administration regulations.

MOTORISTS CAN find gasoline priced lower than his cost, Barwig said. "If people want gasoline at a cheap price, they may get their windows washed and they may get a quart of oil, but that's all," he said, nothing that many dealers do not offer repair service.

Gasoline prices increased during the past two weeks in the Chicago and Downstate Illinois areas, the Chicago Motor Club said Thursday. The club pegs the average Cook County price for regular gas at 59.4 cents a gallong, compared to 58.4 cents two weeks earlier. Premium prices rose .7 cent, to 64.8 cents a gallon.

"The spread between the highest and lowest prices for both regular and premium remains at more than 10 cents a gallon," the report said. "In Chicago and Cook County, a price difference of 13 cents a gallon of regular was found."

Exercise in role-playing to highlight park unit meet

Wary of a problem that plagues many seminars, the Suburban Parks and Recreation Assn. will try something new in its annual Playground and Day Camp Institute June 19. The new program is aimed at making the day's meetings appear more relevant to actual playground or day camp leadership experience through role-playing.

The institute, which will be at Hersey High School, 1900 E. Thomas St., Arlington Heights, will attempt to train employes of suburban recreational organizations who work with youths in their areas.

"Sometimes, they get so much information from the meetings that they don't know what to do with it all," said Barbara Iacovetti, association member and Arlington Heights Park District supervisor. "So we've added another activity to our regular program."

IN THE NEW PROGRAM, park district and recreational agency officials will play the role of camp leaders and the institute participants will play the role of children.

"Some of the people who work in the park districts are 15, 16, 17 years old," said Iacovetti. "We want to give them an idea what it's like working."

More than 500 persons are expected to attend this year's institute. Many persons work for agencies that are members of the association, which is comprised of about 90 suburban park districts and recreational agencies.

Registration forms and further information are available by writing the Arlington Heights Park District, 1005 E. Suffield Dr. The registration charge is $3 for association members and $5 for others.

Checks should be made payable to the Suburban Parks and Recreation Assn. and sent with the registration form by June 1 to the Homewood-Flossmor Park District, 18350 Harwood Ave., Homewood, Ill. 60430.

Besides the role-playing experience, other activities will be offered in the following areas: creative drama and music, special events, safety and accident prevention, preschool programming, Bicentennial ideas and playground activities.

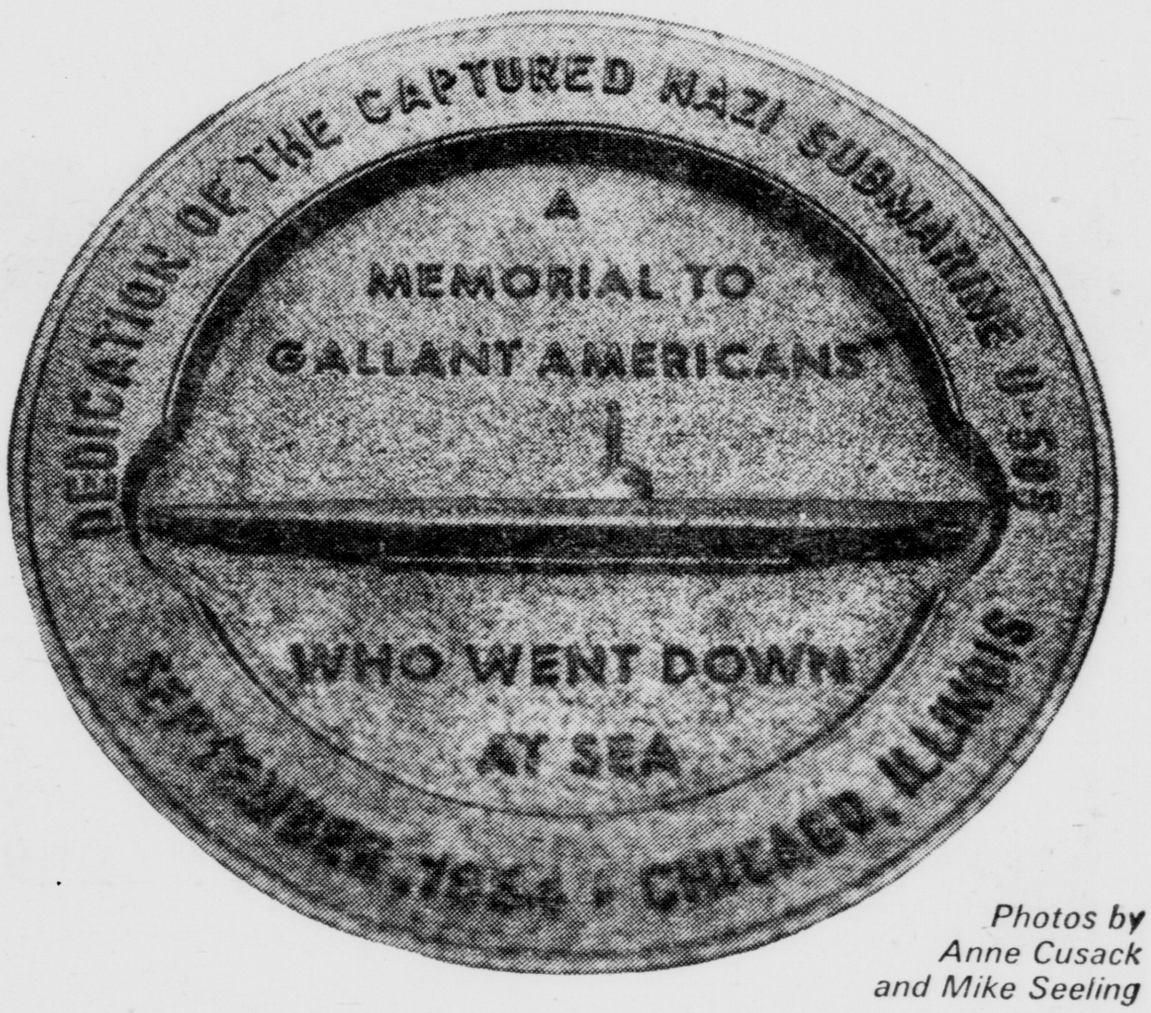
Tokens of war

One collector paid $130,000 for Adolf Hitler's car



Photos by Anne Cusack and Mike Seeling

by John Maes

War relics — the perennial booty of America's wars — are emerging from cedar chests, garage lofts, dusty attics and other hiding places to become a passion of America's collectors.

With rapidity comparable to this year's hoarding of the Bicentennial quarter, collectos and dealers have been snatching up helmets, guns, uniforms, medals and knives. Their values are skyrocketing.

Examples of war mementos commanding high prices are endless with one of the more noteworthy being a man who some months ago paid about $130,000 for an armor-plated Mercedes-Benz owned by Adolf Hitler. Another collector in Indiana traded $5,000 for a wedding sword belonging to Herman Goering, a top official of Nazi Germany.

Collectors and dealers agree the surge in popularity has been fairly recent with most war artifacts accumulating their now hefty values in the last few years.

"I would say the increase in value has probably been about 50 to 70 per cent," said Bob Hopkins, of Bob and Sonni's Coin Mart in Des Plaines.

Hopkins, a collector-dealer in war souvenirs, said "it's amazing" how the value of the items and interest in the hobby have increased. And although not an avocation yet ready to rival coin collecting, he said relic saving has become an established hobby.

Robert Thompson, of Arlington Heights, should know. A teacher at Arlington High School, Thompson collects Nazi Germany war regalia. He said only until a few years ago would one see anything in the line of war relics in coin or antique stores.

"If you tried to sell one there, they would tell you 'that's just junk,'" he said.

What's changed it all? "Demand," said Thompson. "The same as with anything else. If nobody wants war relics, they are worthless."

Also a factor is that more doctors, lawyers and other affluent people are turned onto war souvenirs these days. They can afford higher prices and can outbid competitors for a piece of memorabilia.

The most sought-after collectibles, said Thompson, are also the most rare. "Personal items, or anything that belonged to Hitler or that Hitler gave out or that belonged to any of the high German officials are the things collectors talk about as having tremendous value," he said.

From the World War II collector's standpoint, the ornate and colorful artifacts of the Nazi-era are invariably the most popular. Samurai swords notwithstanding, Japanese relics have just not caught on.

Thompson suggests that greater number of prizes were taken from the European theatre of the war because the ornamentation and opulence of Nazi regalia made the items more attractive to the GI. Although not a World War II veteran himself, Thompson, 39, has obtained many of his items including two complete uniforms, some 100 ceremonial daggers and scores of medals through veterans he's known. Others have come from catalogs and Thompson said some collectors have been known to procure tokens through contact with German veterans or their families.

Unfortunately, Thompson said, there are a lot of phony relics on the market and it's not uncommon for some unwitting collector to pay high prices for mere reproductions of some artifacts.

He remembers answering the ad of a young man in Evanston who had some Nazi daggers for sale but did not know most of them were replicas until Thompson looked them over and told him. But part of what makes the hobby interesting to Thompson is ensuring he's not buying a bogus war relic by carefully examining each purchase.

That can be a formidable task. "It's difficult because of the scarcity of the originals and the abundance of reproductions," he said.

An astute collector, Thompson said he can examine such things as metal types or even the way pins are attached and hallmarkings to make sure he's not getting gypped. He had the opportunity to school himself on how to tell the real from the fake during a trip to Germany when he spent hours in a library researching wartime catalogs and manuals.

Thompson's advice to the budding collector of World War II trophies is to get to know someone who already has a collection or a veteran to help make sure what you're collecting is the real thing.

Jaconsen's collection is akin to a mini-museum containing scores of shells, rifles, pistols, swords, a cannon ramrod and one of the few Civil War-era rockets in existence.

"My dad used to take my brother and me to the Chicago Historical Society in Lincoln Park and I always favored the Civil War display," said Jacobsen, 45, in the carpet business by trade.

What a life.
Imagine, if you can:

- Every meal you eat is of the best restaurant quality and fills your daily vitamin needs.
- You always live in a perfect climate.
- Free medical attention is available 24 hours a day.
- Your leisure time activities are your profession.

This background perhaps explains why the dolphins at Brookfield Zoo's Seven Seas Panorama always look like they are smiling. They've got it made.

In fact, everyone who works in the Panorama seems to wear a perpetual smile.

The Brookfield Seven Seas family is smaller than the dolphin collections of Sea World and Marineland. There are 11 mammals in Seven Seas' program—six humans and five dolphins.

The humans comprise two groups. Irv Wycpalek and Herman Buttran are in charge of the building and the equipment which keeps the dolphin tank filled with filtered "artificial ocean salt water."

The other group is made up of the trainers/keepers. Lead keeper is Edward Krajniak, who is assisted by Randy Prill and Ed Kauskner. The head trainer is Craig Kitchen, and he is assisted by the other

by John Maes

War relics — the perennial booty of America's wars — are emerging from cedar chests, garage lofts, dusty attics and other hiding places to become a passion of America's collectors.

With rapidity comparable to this year's hoarding of the Bicentennial quarter, collectos and dealers have been snatching up helmets, guns, uniforms, medals and knives. Their values are skyrocketing.

Examples of war mementos commanding high prices are endless with one of the more noteworthy being a man who some months ago paid about $130,000 for an armor-plated Mercedes-Benz owned by Adolf Hitler. Another collector in Indiana traded $5,000 for a wedding sword belonging to Herman Goering, a top official of Nazi Germany.

Collectors and dealers agree the surge in popularity has been fairly recent with most war artifacts accumulating their now hefty values in the last few years.

"I would say the increase in value has probably been about 50 to 70 per cent," said Bob Hopkins, of Bob and Sonni's Coin Mart in Des Plaines.

Hopkins, a collector-dealer in war souvenirs, said "it's amazing" how the value of the items and interest in the hobby have increased. And although not an avocation yet ready to rival coin collecting, he said relic saving has become an established hobby.

Robert Thompson, of Arlington Heights, should know. A teacher at Arlington High School, Thompson collects Nazi Germany war regalia. He said only until a few years ago would one see anything in the line of war relics in coin or antique stores.

"If you tried to sell one there, they would tell you 'that's just junk,'" he said.

What's changed it all? "Demand," said Thompson. "The same as with anything else. If nobody wants war relics, they are worthless."

Also a factor is that more doctors, lawyers and other affluent people are turned onto war souvenirs these days. They can afford higher prices and can outbid competitors for a piece of memorabilia.

The most sought-after collectibles, said Thompson, are also the most rare. "Personal items, or anything that belonged to Hitler or that Hitler gave out or that belonged to any of the high German officials are the things collectors talk about as having tremendous value," he said.

From the World War II collector's standpoint, the ornate and colorful artifacts of the Nazi-era are invariably the most popular. Samurai swords notwithstanding, Japanese relics have just not caught on.

Thompson suggests that greater number of prizes were taken from the European theatre of the war because the ornamentation and opulence of Nazi regalia made the items more attractive to the GI. Although not a World War II veteran himself, Thompson, 39, has obtained many of his items including two complete uniforms, some 100 ceremonial daggers and scores of medals through veterans he's known. Others have come from catalogs and Thompson said some collectors have been known to procure tokens through contact with German veterans or their families.

Unfortunately, Thompson said, there are a lot of phony relics on the market and it's not uncommon for some unwitting collector to pay high prices for mere reproductions of some artifacts.

He remembers answering the ad of a young man in Evanston who had some Nazi daggers for sale but did not know most of them were replicas until Thompson looked them over and told him. But part of what makes the hobby interesting to Thompson is ensuring he's not buying a bogus war relic by carefully examining each purchase.

That can be a formidable task. "It's difficult because of the scarcity of the originals and the abundance of reproductions," he said.

An astute collector, Thompson said he can examine such things as metal types or even the way pins are attached and hallmarkings to make sure he's not getting gypped. He had the opportunity to school himself on how to tell the real from the fake during a trip to Germany when he spent hours in a library researching wartime catalogs and manuals.

Thompson's advice to the budding collector of World War II trophies is to get to know someone who already has a collection or a veteran to help make sure what you're collecting is the real thing.

But collectors like Thompson exemplify only one species of the breed. Quite another is Richard Jacobsen of Des Plaines, whose hobby is amassing leftovers from the Civil War, especially artillery shells.

Jaconsen's collection is akin to a mini-museum containing scores of shells, rifles, pistols, swords, a cannon ramrod and one of the few Civil War-era rockets in existence.

"My dad used to take my brother and me to the Chicago Historical Society in Lincoln Park and I always favored the Civil War display," said Jacobsen, 45, in the carpet business by trade.

three in teaching the dolphins how to perform special "behaviors" for Brookfield's daily dolphin shows.

The four men responsible for the dolphins report directly to the zoo's director, George Rabb, who helps train the smooth-skinned swimmers as a kind of hobby.

But no matter how important the work of the trainers, the whole Seven Seas spotlight rests on five bottlenosed dolphins.

Vicky, a 400-pound, 9½ foot, 30-year-old beauty, is the leader of the group. She has been at Brookfield since the show started in August 1961. The largest of the five dolphins,, she is considered to be in "semi-retirement." As Krajniak puts it, "If Vicky wants to perform, it's okay. If she doesn't, that's okay too. All we care about is that she eats and gets her vitamins."

After Vicky is a younger female, Angie. She is 17 years old, about eight feet long and weighs about 325 pounds. Angie is the most "temperamental" of the performers and has been at the zoo for eight years.

Rounding out the performing team is Bunker. This 3-year-old male is the most playful of the group and the most active. He weighs about 250 pounds and is about seven feet long. Bunker has only been at the zoo for a year but has acquired a knack for basketball.

While these three are the stars of the show, there are two other dolphins who have become major attention getters.

These two dolphins — about the same age, weight, and length as Bunker — arrived at Brookfield only a few months ago.

The one male and one female are expected to be named May 24 following a contest recently sponsored by the zoo, giving area residents a chance to cast their vote for a name. Also on that date the new arrivals will be allowed to join their three counterparts in roaming the 200,000 gallon tank.

Currently they are kept behind a net at one end of the tank. It is there that trainers have been working with the couple since their arrival at Brookfield from Florida where they were caught. (All of Brookfield's dolphins come from the Atlantic Ocean near the southern tip of Florida.)

Trainers combine feeding the dolphins with teaching them new behavior patterns. Trainers are careful not to use the word "tricks" when discussing their work with the dolphins. They feel that since dolphins are believed by many to be as intelligent as man that for them to do "tricks" would be demeaning.

It is for these behavioral patterns that Vicky and Angie are rewarded with approximately 16 pounds of mackerel, blue runner, jack and round herring fish a day. Bunker and the two newcomers will eat slightly less. The fish fed to the dolphins are all high quality restaurant stock stuffed with multiple vitamins to supplement the dolphins' diet.

Keepers are very particular about the quality of food. "We have turned away truckloads of fish because the.quality was not fit to feed humans. We are not the most popular fish customers in the area," said Krajniak, "because we are so fussy."

While the three regular stars look forward to their meals, the two new residents still have a hard time getting the fish down.

"We had to teach them to eat. Dolphins do not eat dead fish and vitamins in the wild. The first couple of days with us they wouldn't eat. Finally, they would tear open the fish and swallow it. Things have gotten better, but they still like to play with it (the food) sometimes," explained Krajniak.

Unlike the three performers who are fed during the daily shows at Seven Seas, the newcomers are fed during training sessions with head trainer Kitchen. "We feed them when they perform behaviors. They are trained to expect food when they complete a behavior and hear my whistle," said Kitchen.

During these first months at the zoo, the new dolphins have had to overcome a fear of the sides of their tank. Since they navigate by sonar and send out signals underwater, the signals bounce off the inside walls of the tank and cause an echo. In the wild. when dolphins hear this sound, they avoid the obstacle causing the echo.

"It will take a few months before they really become accustomed to the surroundings. They are getting better with every new day," said Krajniak. The other three dolphins greet their trainers daily by popping out of the water and resting their heads on the ledge of the wall.

It will take trainers about one year to get the new dolphins to function like the current performers. Their "behaviors" now consist of touching a target, following a few hand signals and getting fish when the trainer's whistle blows.

The target is the key to the training of young dolphins just brought from the wild. "These mammals must check out everything before they trust it. Dolphins do not automatically jump through hoops. We have to start by putting part of the hoop underwater and letting the dolphin swim through it. Once it finds out that the hoop will not harm it, we continue to raise the obstacle and associate it with hand signals and the whistle," said Kitchen.

The dolphins are trained to respond to hand signals. For every action there is a hand signal. While it may look like the trainers are talking to the dolphins, they are really using the signals. "Dolphins do not understand English as many people are led to believe. They also cannot talk back to us," said Krajniak. "Our only way of communicating with them is through signals and the whistle."

Studies indicate that dolphins may communicate with each other by sounds transmitted through their blowhole (the hole in the top of their heads.) As for a possible dolphin language, this is still being studied by scientists.

One thing that does appear certain is that dolphins do not communicate through their months. All sounds, whether the mouth is open or closed, come from the blowhole.

Whatever the communication patterns, the trainers at Brookfield have done a successful job in training their marine subjects.

"There must be a sincere trust between us and them," said Krajniak. "We go into the tank and clean it, and they usually play around and watch us. Angie will sometimes get in one of her moods and bump us, but she gets over it.

"This trust is necessary because if the dolphins are sick, we must get in there (the tank) with them. We have spent hours holding up a dolphin so it could stay wet and still breath while sick. I even had one die in my arms. That experience is hard to explain and one you don't soon forget," said Krajniak.

Since, like humans, dolphins are warm-blooded and air-breathing, they must get oxygen. If they become sick and do not get air, they will drown. The trainers therefore keep a constant check on the

Did you know dolphins bite?

There are many facts about dolphins that most people don't know. For instance:

• Dolphins have about 80 razor sharp teeth and they do bite. Teeth are also a clue to a dolphin's age. By pulling a tooth, cutting it in half and counting the number of rings inside — similar to the rings on a tree — you can tell how old a dolphin is.

• Their brain weighs more than a human's — 1,700 grams for the dolphin, 1,450 for the human. The dolphin brain looks like a human brain with many areas the same.

• A pregnant female dolphin will give birth after a year gestation period. The chance for twins is very slim.

• The first known record of a dolphin born in captivity was in England in 1914, but the calf was stillborn. Vicky is the only female at Brookfield Zoo to give birth, but the calf lived only a short time. Zoo officials hope the new dolphins will mate and bear a healthy calf.

• Dolphins cannot sleep for more than five or six minutes without the threat of drowning. The sleep is light and the slightest disturbance will awaken them.

• The bottlenosed dolphin normally swims at a depth between 100 and 150 feet of water in the wild. Some, however, have been known to go as deep as 2,000 feet. At Brookfield the dolphins can only go as deep as 18 feet in their 100- by 25-foot tank.

health of the dolphins. There are constant tests, examinations and medication given to all of them.

When they are not being checked, trained or fed, Brookfield's dolphins are free to do as they please in the tank. For instance:

• Bunker likes to shoot baskets with one of the two basketballs that continually float in the tank. He also has started throwing the ball over the separating net in the tank to the new dolphins. They have begun to flip it back.

• Angie will swim around the tank, do flips or play with Bunker.

• Vicky will swim leisurely around the tank, occasionally stopping to look out the windows that surround the lower half of the tank and thus giving the public a close up view. She also has been known to splash visitors and trainers with a quick snap of her head.

• The new couple continues to play with each other or with Bunker.

All five also occasionally meet underwater at the dividing net, and bubbles can be seen coming from their blowholes, apparently from signals being sent through the tank.

And while the dolphins are busy playing, the trainers are busy keeping the Panorama in shape for the thousands of daily visitors.

When the trainers have a free moment, their favorite pastime is getting into the tank with the dolphins.

Do they ever get tired of their jobs?

"Some things become a bore like any job, but one thing that I will never get tired of is getting into the tank with these dolphins," said trainer Randy Prill, a former school teacher.

Prill then entered the tank and was met at the bottom by his three dorsal-finned friends. Other trainers would enter the tank later in the day to clean it and play with the dolphins.

When Seven Seas Panorama opened in 1961, it was the first inland dolphin show in the U.S. Today there are many similar shows, but Brookfield still is considered to be the finest inland show in the nation.

This reputation has been gained not by the trainers or dolphins working individually, but by the trust that Ed Krajniak talked about each having in the other.

Zoo Director George Rabb gets a new dolphin to hit the target and get a fish from the trainer.

Celebrities:

It will take trainers about one year to get the new dolphins to function like the current performers. Their "behaviors" now consist of touching a target, following a few hand signals and getting fish when the trainer's whistle blows.

The target is the key to the training of young dolphins just brought from the wild. "These mammals must check out everything before they trust it. Dolphins do not automatically jump through hoops. We have to start by putting part of the hoop underwater and letting the dolphin swim through it. Once it finds out that the hoop will not harm it, we continue to raise the obstacle and associate it with hand signals and the whistle," said Kitchen.

The dolphins are trained to respond to hand signals. For every action there is a hand signal. While it may look like the trainers are talking to the dolphins, they are really using the signals. "Dolphins do not understand English as many people are led to believe. They also cannot talk back to us," said Krajniak. "Our only way of communicating with them is through signals and the whistle."

Studies indicate that dolphins may communicate with each other by sounds transmitted through their blowhole (the hole in the top of their heads.) As for a possible dolphin language, this is still being studied by scientists.

One thing that does appear certain is that dolphins do not communicate through their months. All sounds, whether the mouth is open or closed, come from the blowhole.

Whatever the communication patterns, the trainers at Brookfield have done a successful job in training their marine subjects.

"There must be a sincere trust between us and them," said Krajniak. "We go into the tank and clean it, and they usually play around and watch us. Angie will sometimes get in one of her moods and bump us, but she gets over it.

"This trust is necessary because if the dolphins are sick, we must get in there (the tank) with them. We have spent hours holding up a dolphin so it could stay wet and still breath while sick. I even had one die in my arms. That experience is hard to explain and one you don't soon forget," said Krajniak.

Since, like humans, dolphins are warm-blooded and air-breathing, they must get oxygen. If they become sick and do not get air, they will drown. The trainers therefore keep a constant check on the

Richard Jacobsen in his mini-Civil War Museum

Tokens:

Eight years ago his brother, also an inveterate Civil War buff, gave him a 50-pound mortar ball and Jacobsen's collection was born. If you think collecting artillery shells is bland and un-stimulating, Jacobsen will tell you otherwise. It's a science in and of itself.

"The Civil War," he explained, "was one where both sides experimented with new and different types of weapons." Consequently he's found himself going after several varieties of one shell. "But I'm still missing a lot of them," he said.

Often Jacobsen and his brother play Civil War soldiers when they don uniforms and join with clubs that re-enact the battles of the blue and the grey. Together they've re-lived the battles of Gettysburg, New Hope Church and Grapevine Bridge. Some are so spectacular "they're like Hollywood productions," he said.

Most Civil War items are available only through catalogs and other collectors but Jacobsen said if you have a metal detector and know where to look, you might still strike it rich on the battlegrounds.

Souvenir hunters are still dredging up shells, slugs and other relics in the backwoods, farms and fringe areas near main battlegrounds that haven't been combed over. But Jacobsen warns relic seekers to stay away from the sectors designated national historic sites where digging up the turf is not allowed.

On an expedition several years ago to Richmond, Va., site of the Seven Days Battle, Jacobsen and a companion studied maps of artillery positions and skirmish lines and searched the area where errant shells and slugs would have landed. He unearthed a caisson chain and a musket slug while his companion discovered a cannon shell.

Other good places to look include construction sites near battlefields where earth-moving equipment may possibly churn up a relic, Jacobsen advised.

"But you have to be very patient," he said. "The stuff that comes out of the ground from the Civil War is about 115 years old. You just don't buy at Sears."

'Frontier Rendezvous' set May 22, 23 near Wheeling

The Cook County Forest Preserve District will host a Bicentennial-flavored "Frontier Rendezvous" as part of this year's 19th annual Des Plaines River Canoe Race May 22 and 23.

Indians, voyageurs, traders, frontiersmen and 18th century militiamen will gather at Dam No. 1 Forest Preserve, south side of Dundee Roat east of the river near Wheeling. The rendezvous will illustrate the role Midwest rivers and the canoe of North American natives played in developing American history.

Members of the Macoutin Society will portray native Indians who will demonstrate leather work, beadwork and other Indian crafts. Visitors will also be able to view a display of different watercrafts used by 18th Century tribes, including a 75-year-old birchbark canoe.

Early explorers will be represented by the forthcoming LaSalle Expedition II, who are planning to leave Montreal in August on a nine-month re-enactment of Sieur DeLaSalle's voyage to the Gulf of Mexico. Fur-trading and settlement of Illinois by French Canadian voyageurs will be re-enacted by modern-day voyageurs of the Elgin Brigade of Boy Scounts.

A pagent, complete with the Fort Chartres cannon from southern Illinois, will feature traditional formal ritual used to load and fire the cannon during battle. Several military marching units, including the George Rogers Clark Virginia militia and his frontiersman, will illustrate how the American Revolution was fought. Marching drills and historical explanations will be included in the display.

The King's 8th Regiment will represent the British Army foot soldiers and will set up an encampment of the period.

The public can visit the rendezvous 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. both days.

'We need heroes'

Serpico role doesn't scare Birney

by Vernon Scott

David Birney, an Irishman from Cleveland who played a Jewish taxi driver in the defunct "Bridget Loves Bernie" series, will play an Italian cop in the new "Serpico" series.

Birney is the sort of actor who burns with a hard, gem-liks flame, worshiping at the altar of the Muse.

He is the kind of guy who gives Dean Martin headaches.

David was born on Shakespeare's birthday (April 23), was educated at Dartmouth, loves the theater, adores New York and despises Hollywood. Birney is so contemptuous of Los Angeles he prefers the cultural and climatic grandeurs of Cleveland.

But, alas, he demeans himself in California for his art and, doubtless, money.

Birney is unfazed that he will be taking over a role for which Al Pacino won an Academy Award nomination several years ago. He is a cocky guy who approaches the series with supreme confidence.

"I saw 'Serpico' when it first came out," he said. "I haven't seen it since and I don't plan to see it again.

"I'm not the first actor to play a role in television that was done by someone else in the movies. Look at 'M-A-S-H.'"

Those who read the book or saw the film version of "Serpico" know the story is essentially an expose of corruption and coverup in the New York Police Department.

Birney is reluctant to discuss the content of the series for a couple of reasons. He doesn't want to stir the ire of the constabulary of his beloved Manhattan. Secondly, he hasn't yet seen the scripts.

The two-hour pilot show for the series aired last month but it did not necessarily reflect the tenor of future episodes.

"Frank Serpico is still alive and very mysterious regarding his whereabouts," said Birney.

"After the book came out he lived in secrecy in Switzerland, I understand.

"Now he is supposed to be back in this country, but I haven't the slightest idea where. And I'm really not too interested in finding out."

DAVID BIRNEY

He'd probably find more safety at a Mafia board meeting than at roll call in a Manhattan precinct station.

"I'm just an actor," said Birney in an uncharacteristic burst of modesty. "I don't like to talk about the subject of Serpico because it's so sensitive. While we were filming the pilot in New York, the police department provided us with cops to regualte traffic and bystanders.

"Some of the cops were very unfriendly when they discovered we were doing a series on Frank Serpico. Some were sympathetic and thought the story should be told.

"I don't take sides myself because I don't know the facts. I can't say whether Serpico was right or wrong.

"But I think we need heroes like Serpico in post-Watergate America. (Even though Serpico was a pre-Watergate hero.)"

"In the pilot some of the heavies are cops and some are members of organized crime. Serpico is caught in the middle. It's up to NBC if future episodes will deal with corruption in the department."

Birney, who married his "Bridget Loves Bernie" costar, Meredith Baxter, is growing a beard to play the famed undercover cop.

Too bad the series doesn't deal with corrupt Los Angeles cops or maybe even felonious Cleveland bluecoats. One imagines David suffers pangs of conscience at contributing to a project that pictures his beloved New York unfavorably.

It could be worse. Birney could be playing a crooked federal agent. His father is a retired FBI man.

Marquette voyage reenacted on Channel 11 special

The journey of Father Jacques Marquette and Louis Joliet, which opened the Midwest to development, is reenacted in "The Last Voyageurs" Monday at 8 p.m. on Channel 11.

The program is a film record of the canoe voyage in 1973 by six Illinois men, including a Jesuit priest, and a 14-year-old boy. They set off 300 years to the day after the first voyageurs left St. Ignace, Michigan, and faithfully followed the original route down the Fox, Wisconsin and Mississippi rivers to the mouth of the Arkansas.

Then began the difficult journey back upstream on the Mississippi and Illinois rivers to Chicago. The final leg took them to the western shore of Lake Michigan to Green Bay, finishing a journey of more than 3,000 miles.

The four-month canoe journey was filmed by Robert Osborn, prize-winning documentary filmmaker of Chicago.

During their four-month adventure, the modern-day voyageurs put on 165 performances in various communities in the eight states along the routes. The film shows them, visiting with Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley and Cardinal Cody.

The film emphasizes the importance of the Chicago Portage as the link between the Great Lakes and the Mississippi River network. The Portage not only assured Chicago's future but also that of the Midwest. Father Marquette's original journey was used as a guide for the 1973 voyage.

Mackenzie Phillips: child star

MACKENZIE PHILLIPS

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Mackenzie Phillips is not your average All-American teenager but neither does she pretend to be.

She is the unbearably adolescent daughter in the new hit television series, "One Day At A Time."

Mackenzie is 5-feet-8, 16 years old and the daughter of John Phillips, composer-singer of the defunct Mamas and Papas group. She also is tattooed.

Happily, Mackenzie is delightfully capricious, unlike the whining, raging Julie Cooper she portrays in Norman Lear's weekly CBS-TV show.

Movie fans will remember her as the adorable little girl in "American Graffiti" and as the foul-mouthed kid in "Rafferty and the Gold Dust Twins", in which she stole the show from Alan Arkin and Sally Kellerman.

Now about that tattoo. She has a small, blue five-pointed star needled — none too symetrically — on her left wrist.

"A friend and I were driving down Sunset Boulevard one night," she explained, "and I saw this tattoo parlor. I jumped out of the car and ran in to get myself decorated.

"I chose the star because it cost only $2. It was the cheapest design they had."

Mackenzie was only 12 years old at the time. If she'd had $100 she'd probably have settled for nothing less than a peacock on her chest in five different colors.

"My mother hated the tattoo," she said. "But dad thought it was crazy. So far I don't think my blue star has been seen on the show. When I want to hide it I can cover it up with a bracelet or something."

Mackenzie's parents are divorced. She chooses to live with an aunt in a house not too far from school and the studio where her situation comedy is taped.

Mackenzie lighted a cigarette, something she wouldn't do on the show, and allowed as how she has more characteristics in common with her television role than not.

"It's an easy part for me to play because we're both 16," she said. "I know where Julie's head is, so we play it for real. Also, we're both products of a broken home. Julie and I have the same quick temper. We yell a lot and do things on impulse."

Mackenzie may be a post-pubescent 16 still struggling with occasional teen-age skin blemishes, but she is as sophisticated as a woman thrice her age.

It rankles her that she is a 10th grader at the Hollywood Professional School where she studies drama, art, history, English, typing, civil law - and boys.

Mackenzie dates a variety of young men, refusing to be identified with one in particular. Her aunt allows her considerable freedom. During the week she can come home from dates after midnight. There is no hard and fast curfew.

She owns her own automobile and has socked some money away in the bank, thanks in no small part to her one-tenth of one per cent of the profits of "American Graffiti."

California law restricts Mackenzie to a four-hour work day when "One Day At A Time" is shooting. Three hours are devoted to school work in a tiny room with 15-year-old Valerie Bertinelli, who plays her sister in the show and who is a close friend as well.

"The law is ridiculous," said Mackenzie. "I could work seven or eight hours a day with no trouble. The child labor law is the same for kids 8 years old as it is for 18. That doesn't make sense."

Mackenzie is aware she has blossomed as an actress at a time when most young performers are unemployable, suffering through the "awkward stage."

"I don't feel awkward," she concluded, "and I'm looking forward to a long career."

Christopher George

Could you print a picture of Christopher George? Did he play the part of "The Immortal" on the TV series of the same name? N.N.

Christopher George portrayed Ben Richards in that 1970 series, as a rare mortal whose blood contained anti-bodies which made him immune to all disease, including the aging process.

Could you please send me Kate Jackson's address? I have written before with a self-addressed envelope but received no answer. J.G.

Unfortunately, we are unable to answer personal inquiries due to the large volume of mail we receive.

Now for your answer. You can write to Kate in care of ABC-TV, 4151 Prospect Ave., Los Angeles, Calif. 90027.

I would like to know where to write to Clu Gulager who appeared in one of the "Streets of San Francisco" episodes. Please tell me something about him. P.L.

Born in Holdenville, Oklahoma, Clu's early exposure to the theatre arts came at home from his father, the late actor John Gulager.

After study in the United States and abroad, Clu went to Hollywood where his first acting assignment was a guest-starring role in the "Have Gun Will Travel" series. He has since appeared in numerous television and film productions. He established his own actor's workshop for professional actors and has hopes of becoming a director. You can write to him in care of Century Artists, Ltd., 9470 Santa Monica Blvd., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90210.

'We need heroes'

Serpico role doesn't scare Birney

by Vernon Scott

David Birney, an Irishman from Cleveland who played a Jewish taxi driver in the defunct "Bridget Loves Bernie" series, will play an Italian cop in the new "Serpico" series.

Birney is the sort of actor who burns with a hard, gem-liks flame, worshiping at the altar of the Muse.

He is the kind of guy who gives Dean Martin headaches.

David was born on Shakespeare's birthday (April 23), was educated at Dartmouth, loves the theater, adores New York and despises Hollywood. Birney is so contemptuous of Los Angeles he prefers the cultural and climatic grandeurs of Cleveland.

But, alas, he demeans himself in California for his art and, doubtless, money.

Birney is unfazed that he will be taking over a role for which Al Pacino won an Academy Award nomination several years ago. He is a cocky guy who approaches the series with supreme confidence.

"I saw 'Serpico' when it first came out," he said. "I haven't seen it since and I don't plan to see it again.

"I'm not the first actor to play a role in television that was done by someone else in the movies. Look at 'M-A-S-H.'"

Those who read the book or saw the film version of "Serpico" know the story is essentially an expose of corruption and coverup in the New York Police Department.

Naturally, the NYPD did not turn handsprings at learning NBC would make a primetime series of an idealistic cop who unmasks his crooked superiors.

Birney is reluctant to discuss the content of the series for a couple of reasons. He doesn't want to stir the ire of the constabulary of his beloved Manhattan. Secondly, he hasn't yet seen the scripts.

The two-hour pilot show for the series aired last month but it did not necessarily reflect the tenor of future episodes.

"Frank Serpico is still alive and very mysterious regarding his whereabouts," said Birney.

"After the book came out he lived in secrecy in Switzerland, I understand.

"Now he is supposed to be back in this country, but I haven't the slightest idea where. And I'm really not too interested in finding out."

DAVID BIRNEY

He'd probably find more safety at a Mafia board meeting than at roll call in a Manhattan precinct station.

"I'm just an actor," said Birney in an uncharacteristic burst of modesty. "I don't like to talk about the subject of Serpico because it's so sensitive. While we were filming the pilot in New York, the police department provided us with cops to regualte traffic and bystanders.

"Some of the cops were very unfriendly when they discovered we were doing a series on Frank Serpico. Some were sympathetic and thought the story should be told.

"I don't take sides myself because I don't know the facts. I can't say whether Serpico was right or wrong.

"But I think we need heroes like Serpico in post-Watergate America. (Even though Serpico was a pre-Watergate hero.)"

"In the pilot some of the heavies are cops and some are members of organized crime. Serpico is caught in the middle. It's up to NBC if future episodes will deal with corruption in the department."

Birney, who married his "Bridget Loves Bernie" costar, Meredith Baxter, is growing a beard to play the famed undercover cop.

Too bad the series doesn't deal with corrupt Los Angeles cops or maybe even felonious Cleveland bluecoats. One imagines David suffers pangs of conscience at contributing to a project that pictures his beloved New York unfavorably.

It could be worse. Birney could be playing a crooked federal agent. His father is a retired FBI man.

Marquette voyage reenacted on Channel 11 special

The journey of Father Jacques Marquette and Louis Joliet, which opened the Midwest to development, is reenacted in "The Last Voyageurs" Monday at 8 p.m. on Channel 11.

The program is a film record of the canoe voyage in 1973 by six Illinois men, including a Jesuit priest, and a 14-year-old boy. They set off 300 years to the day after the first voyageurs left St. Ignace, Michigan, and faithfully followed the original route down the Fox, Wisconsin and Mississippi rivers to the mouth of the Arkansas.

Then began the difficult journey back upstream on the Mississippi and Illinois rivers to Chicago. The final leg took them to the western shore of Lake Michigan to Green Bay, finishing a journey of more than 3,000 miles.

The four-month canoe journey was filmed by Robert Osborn, prize-winning documentary filmmaker of Chicago.

During their four-month adventure, the modern-day voyageurs put on 165 performances in various communities in the eight states along the routes. The film shows them, visiting with Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley and Cardinal Cody.

The film emphasizes the importance of the Chicago Portage as the link between the Great Lakes and the Mississippi River network. The Portage not only assured Chicago's future but also that of the Midwest. Father Marquette's original journey was used as a guide for the 1973 voyage.

Mackenzie Phillips: child star

MACKENZIE PHILLIPS

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Mackenzie Phillips is not your average All-American teenager but neither does she pretend to be.

She is the unbearably adolescent daughter in the new hit television series, "One Day At A Time."

Mackenzie is 5-feet-8, 16 years old and the daughter of John Phillips, composer-singer of the defunct Mamas and Papas group. She also is tattooed.

Happily, Mackenzie is delightfully capricious, unlike the whining, raging Julie Cooper she portrays in Norman Lear's weekly CBS-TV show.

Movie fans will remember her as the adorable little girl in "American Graffiti" and as the foul-mouthed kid in "Rafferty and the Gold Dust Twins", in which she stole the show from Alan Arkin and Sally Kellerman.

Now about that tattoo. She has a small, blue five-pointed star needled — none too symetrically — on her left wrist.

"A friend and I were driving down Sunset Boulevard one night," she explained, "and I saw this tattoo parlor. I jumped out of the car and ran in to get myself decorated.

"I chose the star because it cost only $2. It was the cheapest design they had."

Mackenzie was only 12 years old at the time. If she'd had $100 she'd probably have settled for nothing less than a peacock on her chest in five different colors.

"My mother hated the tattoo," she said. "But dad thought it was crazy. So far I don't think my blue star has been seen on the show. When I want to hide it I can cover it up with a bracelet or something."

Mackenzie's parents are divorced. She chooses to live with an aunt in a house not too far from school and the studio where her situation comedy is taped.

Mackenzie lighted a cigarette, something she wouldn't do on the show, and allowed as how she has more characteristics in common with her television role than not.

"It's an easy part for me to play because we're both 16," she said. "I know where Julie's head is, so we play it for real. Also, we're both products of a broken home. Julie and I have the same quick temper. We yell a lot and do things on impulse."

Mackenzie may be a post-pubescent 16 still struggling with occasional teen-age skin blemishes, but she is as sophisticated as a woman thrice her age.

It rankles her that she is a 10th grader at the Hollywood Professional School where she studies drama, art, history, English, typing, civil law - and boys.

Mackenzie dates a variety of young men, refusing to be identified with one in particular. Her aunt allows her considerable freedom. During the week she can come home from dates after midnight. There is no hard and fast curfew.

She owns her own automobile and has socked some money away in the bank, thanks in no small part to her one-tenth of one per cent of the profits of "American Graffiti."

California law restricts Mackenzie to a four-hour work day when "One Day At A Time" is shooting. Three hours are devoted to school work in a tiny room with 15-year-old Valerie Bertinelli, who plays her sister in the show and who is a close friend as well.

"The law is ridiculous," said Mackenzie. "I could work seven or eight hours a day with no trouble. The child labor law is the same for kids 8 years old as it is for 18. That doesn't make sense."

Mackenzie is aware she has blossomed as an actress at a time when most young performers are unemployable, suffering through the "awkward stage."

"I don't feel awkward," she concluded, "and I'm looking forward to a long career."

Christopher George

Could you print a picture of Christopher George? Did he play the part of "The Immortal" on the TV series of the same name? N.N.

Christopher George portrayed Ben Richards in that 1970 series, as a rare mortal whose blood contained antibodies which made him immune to all disease, including the aging process.

Could you please send me Kate Jackson's address? I have written before with a self-addressed envelope but received no answer. J.G.

Unfortunately, we are unable to answer personal inquiries due to the large volume of mail we receive.

Now for your answer. You can write to Kate in care of ABC-TV, 4151 Prospect Ave., Los Angeles, Calif. 90027.

I would like to know where to write to Clu Gulager who appeared in one of the "Streets of San Francisco" episodes. Please tell me something about him. P.L.

Born in Holdenville, Oklahoma, Clu's early exposure to the theatre arts came at home from his father, the late actor John Gulager.

After study in the United States and abroad, Clu went to Hollywood where his first acting assignment was a guest-starring role in the "Have Gun Will Travel" series. He has since appeared in numerous television and film productions. He established his own actor's workshop for professional actors and has hopes of becoming a director. You can write to him in care of Century Artists, Ltd., 9470 Santa Monica Blvd., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90210.

TV TIME-LINE

Rather than choose between two popular and promising entries for its fall 1976 schedule, ABC has decided to air them both. "Rich Man, Poor Man" will air Saturdays at 10 p.m. and "Family" is scheduled for 10 p.m. Tuesdays.

"RMPM," to be titled "Rich Man, Poor Man—Book Two," will follow the lives of Rudy Jordache (with Peter Strauss continuing in the role), Julie, Julie's son and the late Tom Jordache's son, Wes, from 1965 to present.

All "Family" regulars have been signed to continue the roles they had in the six-part series that deals with the complexities of family life in the 1970s.

Who needs 'em anyway? Richard Masur (David on "One Day at a Time") and David Groh (Joe on "Rhoda") will not be seen next season due to television's emphasis on the "woman alone" plots. Masur leaves "One Day at a Time" because of creative differences with Norman Lear and the attempt to open up wider story opportunities for Bonnie Franklin.

CBS: more laughs scheduled for fall

by Joan Hanauer

ABC is the kid network, NBC anthologizes and CBS is in business for laughs.

Those were the identities Bud Grant, the new CBS vice president, programs, assigned to the three networks as he talked about the CBS schedule for next fall, outlining some changes in a few favorites and explaining some of what was done.

ABC might object on the basis that aside from its kid-oriented family hour offerings, the network also had big hits last season with drama in the form of "Rich Man, Poor Man" and "Family," but certainly Grant was correct in picturing comedy as the keystone to CBS' success, and the network is adding what it hopes will be even more laughs in September.

"CBS has been the network for comedy and comedy is continuing heavy on our schedule next fall," Grant said, noting in passing that the comedy CBS broadcasts today is very different from the comedy of times past.

"Shows like 'All In The Family' and 'The Mary Tyler Moore Show' are very different from some years ago when CBS had a very successful string of comedies.

"In those years we had 'The Beverly Hillbillies,' 'Green Acres,' 'Andy Griffith' — comedies that were heavily rural. They've been replaced with shows that are more relevant, urbanized.

"One-liners are more important today. You don't do a comedy show by stringing a bunch of one one-liners together. But the punch-up writer (he's the guy who specializes in one-liners) is very important in today's comedy."

Grant said aside from the already announced new shows and schedule changes, the old standbys are being reviewed and in some cases jazzed up to increase their appeal and prevent their drooping into old age, which is a fatal affliction for television shows.

This season Monday night was a big winner for CBS, but next fall there will be some changes made, "Phyllis," for instance, will be softened and made more sympathetic, Grant said.

"Maude" moves into the 8 p.m. slot to provide a strong lead-in for the new comedy, "All's Fair" — the one with Bernadette Peters as a liberal photographer and Richard Crenna as a conservative Washington columnist. It's a Norman Lear comedy, so it will be loud and at least at first it will be controversial.

The final prime time hour will be "Executive Suite," which sounds like a high-rise "Peyton Place." Grant countered by saying, "It's a serial, as 'Peyton Place' was a serial, but it's big city whereas 'Peyton Place' was small town. It's like saying 'All In The Family' and 'Beverly Hillbillies' were the same because they both were 30-minute comedies."

Tuesdays Telma Hopkins will play a bigger role on "Tony Orlando and Dawn," Grant said, and at least one — perhaps two — comedians will move in when it moves to the new time slot. Without "The Bionic Woman" to compete, CBS is hoping for a bigger audience.

The remainer of Tuesday remains in place, with only production staff changes here and there.

Up against "Bionic Woman," CBS is throwing "Good Times," which he said hit hard times when "The Fonz" was moved up front on ABC's "Happy Days." Then there'll be "Ball Four," followed by "All In The Family."

Grant said "M-A-S-H" on Tuesday proved an excellent lead-in for launching "One Day At A Time," and now CBS is moving "All In The Family" to Wednesday to lead-in the sitcom "Alice."

"The Blue Knight" will top off the evening and now Bumper Morgan will acquire a sidekick.

On Thursdays, it's "The Waltons" — Mary Ellen will get married, John Boy will start a town newspaper and Mother Walton will go in for adult education.

Grant was hoping that with Michael Douglas leaving "Streets of San Francisco," the competition would be easier for "Hawaii Five-O," while Barnaby Jones will hire his young male cousin to pick up the pace and add sex appeal.

Friday nights not only will present the new "Spencer's Pilots," but also movies that include some beauts — "Chinatown," "Paper Moon" and, for the violence freaks, Charles Bronson in "Death Wish."

The Saturday night comedy lineup remains in place, but Grant said "Doc" would be working out of a free clinic, assisted by a young black intern, in hopes of ironing out the dip "Doc" creates in the Saturday ratings.

Grant was asked whether CBS was planning any blockbusters on the order of its extraordinarily successful "Helter, Skelter" tale of the Manson family, but he would answer only, "I hope we are going to come up with something but I can't talk about it at the moment."

WTTW to air — 'The Mikado'

The D'Oyly Opera Company will perform Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Mikado" Thursday at 7 p.m. on Channel 11.

Based on the stage production by Anthony Beach, this 1967 film features the entire cast and was directed for the screen by Stuart Burge. The program is part of Channel 11's current "Opera Theatre" series.

"The Mikado" had its first D'Oyly production at the Savoy Theatre in London in 1885. In the film, the City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra plays the score. Other performances in the series are "Die Fledermaus" May 27, with the popular Strauss waltzes; "The Flying Dutchman" June 3; and "Trouble in Tahiti", Leonard Bernstein's 1952 comic opera satirizing the 1950s, June 10.

TV TIME-LINE

Rather than choose between two popular and promising entries for its fall 1976 schedule, ABC has decided to air them both. "Rich Man, Poor Man" will air Saturdays at 10 p.m. and "Family" is scheduled for 10 p.m. Tuesdays.

"RMPM," to be titled "Rich Man, Poor Man—Book Two," will follow the lives of Rudy Jordache (with Peter Strauss continuing in the role), Julie, Julie's son and the late Tom Jordache's son, Wes, from 1965 to present.

All "Family" regulars have been signed to continue the roles they had in the six-part series that deals with the complexities of family life in the 1970s.

Who needs 'em anyway? Richard Masur (David on "One Day at a Time") and David Groh (Joe on "Rhoda") will not be seen next season due to television's emphasis on the "woman alone" plots. Masur leaves "One Day at a Time" because of creative differences with Norman Lear and the attempt to open up wider story opportunities for Bonnie Franklin.

(Solution below)

This is a fortunate time in American chess history. Never before have so many young talents adorned our chess scene. (In this column we've had occasion to mention many of them: Tarjan, Weinstein, Rogoff, Benjamin, etc.) Yet how confident can we be that their bright promise will be fulfilled?

I am reminded of the apt comment by grandmaster Larry Evans that "in the U.S. chessplayers are like weeds trying to grow in a cracked pavement." If his observation holds today, how many of these potential chess greats will survive the bitter struggle ahead?

How many will get the invitations to major tournaments so necessary for their development? How many will be able to both play chess and earn a living without undue strain? And how many will find the ambiguous prestige and uncertain rewards of professional chess worth the effort?

Note that the national chess federation of this, the richest of all countries, had to "withdraw because of financial reasons" its bid for the 1976 Chess Olympiad.

Tony Miles was riding high when he began play in the California annual Lone Pine tournament. He had recently gained both England's first grandmaster title and the 5000-pound sterling bonus accompanying it put up by countryman, banker, and fairy godfather James Slater.

But in his third round of play in that California "sweepstakes" he suffered an abrupt comeuppance at the hands of the Wisconsin master Bill Martz.

Win at bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

"Why didn't you bid three notrump?" yelled South.

"I certainly should have," replied North. "Still a 5-2 heart break would probably have beaten three notrump, while you should have made your four spades."

West had started by leading three rounds of hearts. East took the third one and led a fourth round of the suit. South gleefully discarded a low club. West chucked a club also. South ruffed in dummy and played the king and jack of trumps. When East showed out South had to try to get to his hand by playing ace and another club and ruffing. Unfortunately, West overruffed and the rubber was still going on.

If South had really been alert, he would have reasoned that East was not in the Santa Claus business and would never have led that fourth heart if he held the club king. If West over ruffs, South simply goes up with the king. So, South simply ruffs low in his hand, draws trumps and takes the successful club finesse.

CBS: more laughs scheduled for fall

by Joan Hanauer

ABC is the kid network, NBC anthologizes and CBS is in business for laughs.

Those were the identities Bud Grant, the new CBS vice president, programs, assigned to the three networks as he talked about the CBS schedule for next fall, outlining some changes in a few favorites and explaining some of what was done.

ABC might object on the basis that aside from its kid-oriented family hour offerings, the network also had big hits last season with drama in the form of "Rich Man, Poor Man" and "Family," but certainly Grant was correct in picturing comedy as the keystone to CBS' success, and the network is adding what it hopes will be even more laughs in September.

"CBS has been the network for comedy and comedy is continuing heavy on our schedule next fall," Grant said, noting in passing that the comedy CBS broadcasts today is very different from the comedy of times past.

"Shows like 'All In The Family' and 'The Mary Tyler Moore Show' are very different from some years ago when CBS had a very successful string of comedies.

"In those years we had 'The Beverly Hillbillies,' 'Green Acres,' 'Andy Griffith' — comedies that were heavily rural. They've been replaced with shows that are more relevant, urbanized.

"One-liners are more important today. You don't do a comedy show by stringing a bunch of one one-liners together. But the punch-up writer (he's the guy who specializes in one-liners) is very important in today's comedy."

Grant said aside from the already announced new shows and schedule changes, the old standbys are being reviewed and in some cases jazzed up to increase their appeal and prevent their drooping into old age, which is a fatal affliction for television shows.

This season Monday night was a big winner for CBS, but next fall there will be some changes made, "Phyllis," for instance, will be softened and made more sympathetic, Grant said.

"Maude" moves into the 8 p.m. slot to provide a strong lead-in for the new comedy, "All's Fair" — the one with Bernadette Peters as a liberal photographer and Richard Crenna as a conservative Washington columnist. It's a Norman Lear comedy, so it will be loud and at least at first it will be controversial.

The final prime time hour will be "Executive Suite," which sounds like a high-rise "Peyton Place." Grant countered by saying, "It's a serial, as 'Peyton Place' was a serial, but it's big city whereas 'Peyton Place' was small town. It's like saying 'All In The Family' and 'Beverly Hillbillies' were the same because they both were 30-minute comedies."

Tuesdays Telma Hopkins will play a bigger role on "Tony Orlando and Dawn," Grant said, and at least one — perhaps two — comedians will move in when it moves to the new time slot. Without "The Bionic Woman" to compete, CBS is hoping for a bigger audience.

The remainer of Tuesday remains in place, with only production staff changes here and there.

Up against "Bionic Woman," CBS is throwing "Good Times," which he said hit hard times when "The Fonz" was moved up front on ABC's "Happy Days." Then there'll be "Ball Four," followed by "All In The Family."

Grant said "M-A-S-H" on Tuesday proved an excellent lead-in for launching "One Day At A Time," and now CBS is moving "All In The Family" to Wednesday to lead-in the sitcom "Alice."

"The Blue Knight" will top off the evening and now Bumper Morgan will acquire a sidekick.

On Thursdays, it's "The Waltons" — Mary Ellen will get married, John Boy will start a town newspaper and Mother Walton will go in for adult education.

Grant was hoping that with Michael Douglas leaving "Streets of San Francisco," the competition would be easier for "Hawaii Five-O," while Barnaby Jones will hire his young male cousin to pick up the pace and add sex appeal.

Friday nights not only will present the new "Spencer's Pilots," but also movies that include some beauts — "Chinatown," "Paper Moon" and, for the violence freaks, Charles Bronson in "Death Wish."

The Saturday night comedy lineup remains in place, but Grant said "Doc" would be working out of a free clinic, assisted by a young black intern, in hopes of ironing out the dip "Doc" creates in the Saturday ratings.

Grant was asked whether CBS was planning any blockbusters on the order of its extraordinarily successful "Helter, Skelter" tale of the Manson family, but he would answer only, "I hope we are going to come up with something but I can't talk about it at the moment."

WTTW to air — 'The Mikado'

The D'Oyly Opera Company will perform Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Mikado" Thursday at 7 p.m. on Channel 11.

Based on the stage production by Anthony Beach, this 1967 film features the entire cast and was directed for the screen by Stuart Burge. The program is part of Channel 11's current "Opera Theatre" series.

"The Mikado" had its first D'Oyly production at the Savoy Theatre in London in 1885. In the film, the City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra plays the score. Other performances in the series are "Die Fledermaus" May 27, with the popular Strauss waltzes; "The Flying Dutchman" June 3; and "Trouble in Tahiti", Leonard Bernstein's 1952 comic opera satirizing the 1950s, June 10.

Tales of a trainer

Baumann teases death and survives

by Ira Berkow

He placed his surprisingly steady hands on her cheeks and sweetly puckered up and planted a big kiss on her moist, spongy nose.

The smooch seemed to thrill the large, gasping darkened circus audience more than it did the pair in the spotlighted steel cage in center ring — Charly Baumann, the tiger trainer, and Kismet, the 500-pound object of Charly's ardor.

When Charly and his wife, Araceli, a circus showgirl, were first married, Baumann recalls she'd watch the act and "be shaking at 80 miles an hour." From nervousness, it is assumed, not jealousy.

Twice a day, Charly performs his tiger act when the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus is touring. The 14 Bengal and Siberian tigers pad slowly, menacingly into the ring, tails a-twitch. Charly, in a tight, sequined, black-and-orange-striped suit a la mode the tigers, awaits with whip. The tigers then jump synchronized onto pedestals, leap through fiery rings and do jigs.

At 47 and 6-1, Charly has coal-black hair and a thick-chested build. He is intense but tough and not your big joke-teller. He has been a tiger trainer for more than 25 years. His parents had been in the circus and were also movie stunt-riders in Germany before World War II.

When the Nazis caught his parents helping a Jew escape from Germany to Spain, they were thrown into concentration camps. His father died in a gas chamber, his mother endured "medical experiments." While in an orphanage, Charly was drafted into the German Army near war's end. He was captured by the Americans, then was suddenly freed.

He returned to Berlin where he lived in such poverty in the bomb-strafed city that he had to scrounge in garbage cans for food.

After the war he joined the circus as an apprentice horse trainer. One day he witnessed a cage full of lions mauling their trainer. He leaped into the cage brandishing only a stick, drove the big cats off and saved the trainer's life.

His courage was rewarded with an offer to become a lion and tiger trainer. Reflecting upon his instinctive heroism, Charly began to have reservations about those animals. He swiftly turned down the offer. But when a second offer came, sweetening the pot, he decided to give it a try. He thought versatility was important. You could always be sure of a job then. And you wouldn't have to dip into the garbage can for dinner.

In a similar way, Baumann accepted the position of director of the Ringling Bros. circus. "When the day comes," he said, "that I begin to lose my guts in the ring, I'll always have the directorship to fall back on."

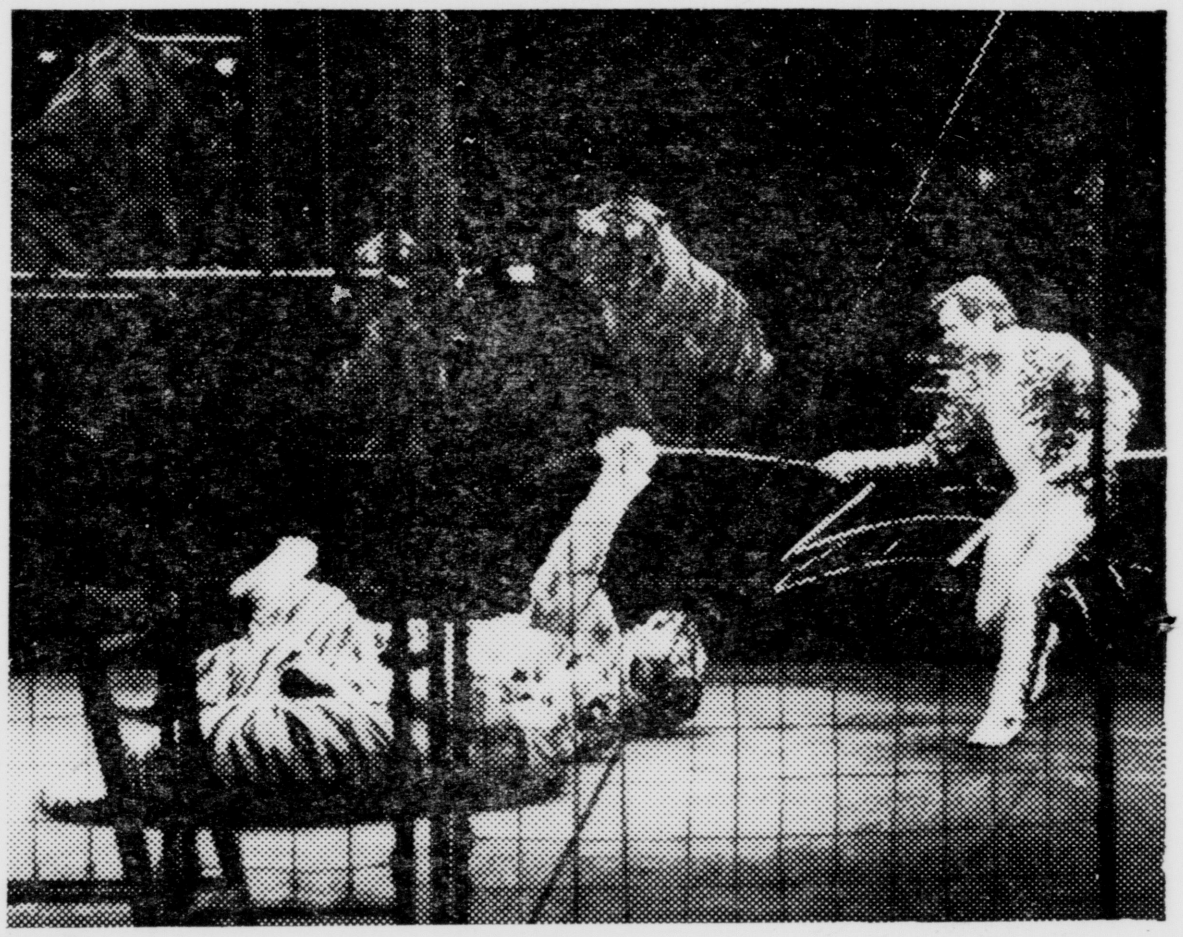
He knows about trainers who have been killed by lions and tigers. One had his throat and chest ripped out. Another, who committed the insane folly of being in a practice ring without an assistant trainer or groom around, disappeared. Only a single shoe with a human foot inside was found.

For good reason, then, the show is a spine-tingler.

Charly eschews the traditional Clyde Beatty chair and blank-loaded pistol. He says he relies on love. He has raised these cats from kittens, working with them twice a day for four or five months. When they follow his cues — arm raised, they rise on hind legs with front paws prayerfully up; arms down, they jump off their pedestals and roll around, as many as five in unision — he feeds them a hunk of stew meat at the end of a long stick ("they bite the stick and think it's an extension of me, so they come to believe they can't hurt me"). When they are naughty, he hollers at them and spanks them with a broomstick.

He also says he never makes them go against the grain of their natural dignity. He never asks them to do what they can't do naturally. If, say, a tiger can't roll over, he doesn't force it to.

Tigers and lions (little difference in training aptitude except that male lions tend to be quite lazy) no matter how well-trained, must always be watched and the trainer must never lose his concentration.



Baumann in the ring: "They know when I'm thinking about something else."

"They know when I'm thinking about something else," he said. "Maybe my commands, are too loud, or my cues are too hurried."

Charly has been mauled several times, the last being in 1961 when he "crowded" the tiger Assur. "We were walking together and I was not thinking and walked too close to his head," said Baumann. "He wasn't used to that. He turned and started chewing at me. Then he picked me up and carried me around the ring by my knee. I was more stunned than hurt."

Charly says that he returned to the ring the way one would if he had recently had a car accident. He says he has not yet begun "hitting the bottle," as some other aging trainers have done. "That's what happens when they begin to lose their guts," he said. "And that's when I know it's time to hang up my whip."

Shelby Lyman on chess

This is a fortunate time in American chess history. Never before have so many young talents adorned our chess scene. (In this column we've had occasion to mention many of them: Tarjan, Weinstein, Rogoff, Benjamin, etc.) Yet how confident can we be that their bright promise will be fulfilled?

I am reminded of the apt comment by grandmaster Larry Evans that "in the U.S. chessplayers are like weeds trying to grow in a cracked pavement." If his observation holds today, how many of these potential chess greats will survive the bitter struggle ahead?

How many will get the invitations to major tournaments so necessary for their development? How many will be able to both play chess and earn a living without undue strain? And how many will find the ambiguous prestige and uncertain rewards of professional chess worth the effort?

Note that the national chess federation of this, the richest of all countries, had to "withdraw because of financial reasons" its bid for the 1976 Chess Olympiad.

Tony Miles was riding high when he began play in the California annual Lone Pine tournament. He had recently gained both England's first grandmaster title and the 5000-pound sterling bonus accompanying it put up by countryman, banker, and fairy godfather James Slater.

But in his third round of play in that California "sweepstakes" he suffered an abrupt comeuppance at the hands of the Wisconsin master Bill Martz.

In the diagrammed position, (see SOLVE-IT), Martz gave up a rook for a bishop and penetrated his opponent's broken king's pawn position. At the end Miles had no adquate defense to the threat of 35. N-B6ch, K-Q1; 36. Q-B8ch, Q-K1; 37.QxQ mate.

Win at bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

"Why didn't you bid three notrump?" yelled South.

"I certainly should have," replied North. "Still a 5-2 heart break would probably have beaten three notrump, while you should have made your four spades."

West had started by leading three rounds of hearts. East took the third one and led a fourth round of the suit. South gleefully discarded a low club. West chucked a club also. South ruffed in dummy and played the king and jack of trumps. When East showed out South had to try to get to his hand by playing ace and another club and ruffing. Unfortunately, West overruffed and the rubber was still going on.

If South had really been alert, he would have reasoned that East was not in the Santa Claus business and would never have led that fourth heart if he held the club king. If West over ruffs, South simply goes up with the king. So, South simply ruffs low in his hand, draws trumps and takes the successful club finesse.

Parsley, sage, rosemary and thyme. Ann Koepke explains and demonstrates how to grow and cook with these herbs today at the Chicago Historical Society.

Ms. Koepke, a former Evanston schoolteacher whose hobby is growing herbs, will focus on culinary varieties. She will discuss herbs that can be grown in the home and out of doors, how to care for them, when to harvest them and how to use them. A list of easy-to-grow herbs and recommended reading will be provided.

The demonstration is from 1 to 4 p.m. and is free with admission to the society, Clark Street and North Avenue. Admission is $1 adults, 50 cents for those aged 6-17 and 25 cents for senior citizens.

The society has also announced it will raise its membership dues effective today. New rates are $20 for annual membership, $100 for governing annual membership and $500 for life membership.

Tales of a trainer

by Ira Berkow

He placed his surprisingly steady hands on her cheeks and sweetly puckered up and planted a big kiss on her moist, spongy nose.

The smooch seemed to thrill the large, gasping darkened circus audience more than it did the pair in the spotlighted steel cage in center ring — Charly Baumann, the tiger trainer, and Kismet, the 500-pound object of Charly's ardor.

When Charly and his wife, Araceli, a circus showgirl, were first married, Baumann recalls she'd watch the act and "be shaking at 80 miles an hour." From nervousness, it is assumed, not jealousy.

Twice a day, Charly performs his tiger act when the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus is touring. The 14 Bengal and Siberian tigers pad slowly, menacingly into the ring, tails a-twitch. Charly, in a tight, sequined, black-and-orange-striped suit a la mode the tigers, awaits with whip. The tigers then jump synchronized onto pedestals, leap through fiery rings and do jigs.

At 47 and 6-1, Charly has coal-black hair and a thick-chested build. He is intense but tough and not your big joke-teller. He has been a tiger trainer for more than 25 years. His parents had been in the circus and were also movie stunt-riders in Germany before World War II.

When the Nazis caught his parents helping a Jew escape from Germany to Spain, they were thrown into concentration camps. His father died in a gas chamber, his mother endured "medical experiments." While in an orphanage, Charly was drafted into the German Army near war's end. He was captured by the Americans, then was suddenly freed.

He returned to Berlin where he lived in such poverty in the bomb-strafed city that he had to scrounge in garbage cans for food.

After the war he joined the circus as an apprentice horse trainer. One day he witnessed a cage full of lions mauling their trainer. He leaped into the cage brandishing only a stick, drove the big cats off and saved the trainer's life.

His courage was rewarded with an offer to become a lion and tiger trainer. Reflecting upon his instinctive heroism, Charly began to have reservations about those animals. He swiftly turned down the offer. But when a second offer came, sweetening the pot, he decided to give it a try. He thought versatility was important. You could always be sure of a job then. And you wouldn't have to dip into the garbage can for dinner.

In a similar way, Baumann accepted the position of director of the Ringling Bros. circus. "When the day comes," he said, "that I begin to lose my guts in the ring, I'll always have the directorship to fall back on."

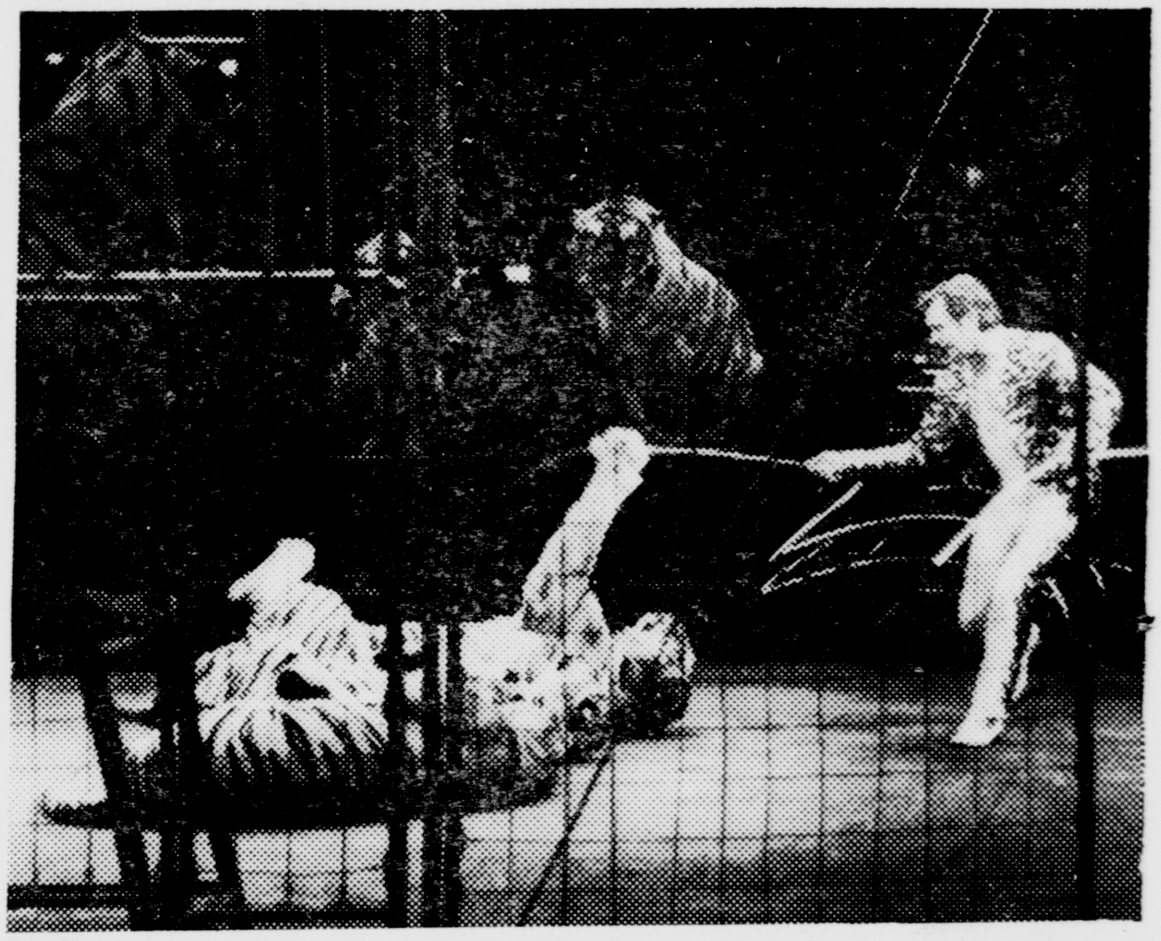
He knows about trainers who have been killed by lions and tigers. One had his throat and chest ripped out. Another, who committed the insane folly of being in a practice ring without an assistant trainer or groom around, disappeared. Only a single shoe with a human foot inside was found.

For good reason, then, the show is a spine-tingler.

Charly eschews the traditional Clyde Beatty chair and blank-loaded pistol. He says he relies on love. He has raised these cats from kittens, working with them twice a day for four or five months. When they follow his cues — arm raised, they rise on hind legs with front paws prayerfully up; arms down, they jump off their pedestals and roll around, as many as five in unision — he feeds them a hunk of stew meat at the end of a long stick ("they bite the stick and think it's an extension of me, so they come to believe they can't hurt me"). When they are naughty, he hollers at them and spanks them with a broomstick.

He also says he never makes them go against the grain of their natural dignity. He never asks them to do what they can't do naturally. If, say, a tiger can't roll over, he doesn't force it to.

Tigers and lions (little difference in training aptitude except that male lions tend to be quite lazy) no matter how well-trained, must always be watched and the trainer must never lose his concentration.



Baumann in the ring: "They know when I'm thinking about something else."

"They know when I'm thinking about something else," he said. "Maybe my commands, are too loud, or my cues are too hurried."

Charly has been mauled several times, the last being in 1961 when he "crowded" the tiger Assur. "We were walking together and I was not thinking and walked too close to his head," said Baumann. "He wasn't used to that. He turned and started chewing at me. Then he picked me up and carried me around the ring by my knee. I was more stunned than hurt."

Charly says that he returned to the ring the way one would if he had recently had a car accident. He says he has not yet begun "hitting the bottle," as some other aging trainers have done. "That's what happens when they begin to lose their guts," he said. "And that's when I know it's time to hang up my whip."
